U. S. Request Denied

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Hungary's minister in Washington, Aladar Szegedy-Maszak, yesterday defied orders from the new Communist-controlled government in Budapest to come home for "consultation."

The minister, whom American troops rescued from the Dachau concentration camp horrors in Germany two years ago, announced that he did not recognize the new government and would not resign his post.

Three of his legation associates joined him in deciding to become exiles rather than take orders from the new regime. All of them have been assured of sanctuary in this country.

It became increasingly probable yesterday that the United States would refuse, at least for the present, to recognize the new government in Hungary.

Chapin Confers With Truman

President Truman summoned Selden Chapin, jr., the new American Minister to Hungary, to the White House for a discussion of the Hungarian situation. Chapin's departure for his new post was expected to be delayed, at least until the United States got the full facts about the shift of Premiers in Budapest.

Last night Szegedy-Maszak said in an interview broadcast by ABC that his idea in declining to go home was to remain "where I may still raise my voice for my country."

He said the overturn was "one engineered by outside force," and added:

"And I wish to say that this is a test case for the small, defeated nations as to whether they are to be treated as independent nations or to be consigned to the position of satellites."

An urgent demand for the facts was cabled yesterday to Brig. Gen. George H. Weems, American representative on the Allied Control Council in Hungary. Weems was asked to get the "information" which the Soviet chairman of the council, Lieut. Gen. B. P. Sviridov, transmitted to the Hungarian government just before last week's dismissal of the anti-Communist Premier Ferenc Nagy.

Under the statute governing the Allied Control Council, the governments of the United States and Great Britain are entitled to any information received by the Con-

Moscow Reports Britain Lending Arms to Norway

New York, June 4 (U.P.).—Radio Moscow, quoting the Oslo Labor newspaper Arbeiderbladet, said tonight that Britain is sending a cruiser, several destroyers, planes and other arms to Norway under a "lend-sell" agreement negotiated by the Norwegian Defense Minister during his current stay in London.

The broadcast, heard here by NBC, said that Britain had agreed to lend the 13-year-old 5220-ton cruiser Arethusa to the Norwegian Navy for the next four years. The destroyers, planes and other arms are to be sold to Norway, Moscow said.

The Moscow commentator said that Arbeiderbladet got its facts from "official government sources."

Braden Quits Position in State Dept.

President Accepts Resignation After Conference With Argentine Envoy

Spruille Braden, whose name had come to be associated with American firmness toward Argentina, resigned yesterday as Assistant Secretary of State in charge of Latin American Affairs.

President Truman accepted his resignation a day after meeting with the Argentine Ambassador and apparently putting relations with Argentina on a friendly footing after years of strain.

Neither Braden nor the President referred in their exchange of letters to their recent disagreements.

Family Duties Cited

Braden simply said his family responsibilities "make imperative my return to private business at an early date."

The President replied:

"Your record of public service has been outstanding whether as delegate to the international conferences or as ambassador in such important posts as Colombia, Cuba and Argentina. The country has been the beneficiary of your patience and skilful negotiations."

Braden was not in town to present his resignation personally. He was not present at Tuesday's White House meeting with the Argentine Ambassador, and was on his way to Butte, Mont., yesterday to receive an honorary degree from the Montana School of Mines.

Armour Is Mentioned

The name of Norman Armour, one of the State Department's most experienced career officials, continued to be mentioned prominently as Braden's successor.

It was taken for granted that Ambassador George S. Messersmith in Buenos Aires, who disagreed sharply with Braden's policies, would be transferred or retired. This would give Secretary Marshall a clean slate of new Latin American advisers before entering upon the coming Inter-American defense negotiations at Rio de Janeiro.

The long-delayed conference, which will attempt to write a permanent treaty of mutual assistance for the Western Hemisphere, is expected to be convened soon, perhaps as early as August.

No Surprise

Braden's resignation had been predicted and rumored so often that it came as no surprise whatever. The disagreements between him and other State Department advisers had never been as sharp

Bring 400,000 Refugees Here, Stratton Urges

Repatriation Efforts Blocked by Smear Campaign, Says Rooks

Bitter charges and countercharges blew up and down the length of Pennsylvania ave. yesterday as Congress started to consider what this Nation should do about Europe's displaced persons.

In the name of humanity and sound national self-interest Representative William G. Stratton (R., Ill.) asked a House Immigration Subcommittee yesterday to approve his bill to bring 400,000 of Europe's homeless to this country over a four-year period.

Meanwhile, Maj. Gen. Lowell W. Rooks, UNRRA director general, called a press conference to charge that anti-Communists were conducting a "smear campaign" to block efforts to repatriate refugees to Soviet-controlled homelands.

Rooks angrily attacked a memorandum which the Refugee Defense Committee of New York recently sent to the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

He quoted the memorandum as saying that "if the international relief organization should develop into the continuation, both in personnel and in policy, of the unlamented UNRRA, then it will earn for itself the curses of all its million wards, as UNRRA has already done for itself."

Employes of U. S. Here Past Worst of Postwar Job Pruning

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Washington's Government workers have come through the worst of the postwar pruning of Federal payrolls. The number of Federal people, civilian and military, in the capital city, has been cut from a wartime peak of 345,000 to a present total of 225,000. This reduction of more than 120,000 in the Government's work force in the capital brings the staff nearer firing goals. Some officials insist the total will not drop below 200,000 civilian workers. Returning war-time "refugee bureaus" are, meantime, introducing an offsetting factor that soon will make itself felt, with some 5000 employees on their way back in returns already scheduled.

These are the statistics, checked with the Civil Service Commission, on civilian employment here:

The wartime peak was reached in February, 1944, when 287,244 were employed in this city. On April 1, the latest official tabulation, the commission counted 217,884 civilians here, or a net reduction of 69,260 from the record high.

In addition, the commission estimates unofficially that there has been a further reduction here of at least 5000 since the April 1 count, or a total reduction of about 75,000 among civilian employes.

Military strength has been reduced as follows:

The Navy Department had on duty at headquarters here a record number of 32,725 military people on June 30, 1945. All military people are included, Waves, officers and enlisted men and women. Today the number is estimated at 7000, or a reduction of 25,725. Furthermore, the Navy has plans to cut its military strength to 4150 by December.

At the War Department there was a wartime high of 26,000 military people at headquarters on June 30, 1945. On March 1, the last official available count, the number had dwindled to 4418, a reduction of 21,582. And a further cut among the military is planned.

Add up the reductions and you'll get 75,000 civilians and 47,307 military, or a grand total of 122,307

Eisler Loses 'Different Judge' Plea

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

It'll be hard to find a Federal judge not opposed to communism, District Justice Alexander Holtzoff said yesterday in denying a plea for another judge to Gerhart Eisler.

"If opposition to communism were a ground for disqualifying a judge, I dare say it would be a baffling problem to find a Federal judge who is qualified to sit," he said.

Eisler, said by the FBI to be Moscow representative to the Communist Party in the United States, accused Justice Holtzoff of bias and asked that another judge be assigned to preside at his trial for contempt of Congress. He said Justice Holtzoff was biased because of his 15 years as associate counsel for the Department of Justice before he came to the bench.

After only four hours of testimony, the Government announced it would rest its case today after cross-examination of Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee. Eisler was charged with contempt for refusing to testify last February 6.

As for his friendship with J. Edgar Hoover, FBI Chief, Judge Holtzoff said:

". . . If friendship with the head of a law enforcement agency is ground for disqualifying a judge, then any judge of this court who happens to be a friend of the superintendent of police could never sit in a criminal case. Such a conclusion would be manifestly absurd."

Moreover, he said Eisler is not

Leftists Penetrate Oak Ridge Plants, Rep. Thomas Says

New York, June 4 (AP).—Representative J. Parnell Thomas, (R., N. J.), chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, said today "fellow travelers, if not actual members of the Communist party, have ensconced themselves" in the atomic energy plants at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

"The Atomic Energy Commission must come to grips shortly with pro-Soviet infiltration of its own organization," he declared in the current issue of Liberty Magazine. He urged that atomic bomb production and research be placed under full military control.

At Oak Ridge, he said, he noticed an "absence of elementary security precautions. There is nothing to stop anyone from climbing the fence, even in daylight, and approaching within perhaps 75 yards of one of the three widely separated plants. If anyone were bent on sabotage, it would be possible to do considerable damage at 75 yards even with hand weapons."

Tax Increase Might Raise D. C. Rents

If Pressed, He Would Be Forced to Study Lifting of Ceilings, Administrator Says

Washington property tax and water-rate boosts might pave the way for a general boost in rent ceilings here.

District Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell said yesterday tax and water boosts "would pose a very serious question as to whether there should be a general rate increase to take care of part of them at least."

A new District tax program approved by a House Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee calls for boosting the property tax rate from $1.75 to $2 per $100 and raising water rates 25 per cent.

Congressional approval of these tax boosts, said Cogswell, would mean that if he were pressed he would have to give very serious consideration to a general increase in rents.

Cogswell said he has authority to make a blanket increase in rents, by regulation or order, whenever he finds the increase justified by a general increase in taxes or services.

Besides water and property rate boosts, the program calls for a one-cent increase per gallon in the gasoline tax, doubling of auto inspection fees, and expansion of the local income tax for individuals and unincorporated business not now taxed.

Also in the plan is a four-million-dollar boost in the present eight-million-dollar Federal payment,

House Shouts Down New Effort to Cut Strength of Army

Post Reporter

The House overwhelmingly shouted down an attempt to pare the strength of the Army yesterday after hearing warnings that Russia understands only "the language of force."

The same note was sounded by a group of Democrats who battled to have the House restore a 40-million-dollar cut in funds for the Army Air Corps in the 5½-billion-dollar military supply bill.

"For God's sake don't weaken our defenses now," shouted Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.) to a move to cut 30,000 enlisted men and 5000 officers from the Army's payroll allotment next year.

The amendment was offered by Reprenestative Everett Dirksen (R., Ill.) who said the War Department's estimate was based on a number of enlistments which it cannot reach.

The House, still considering the War Department's $5,240,982,423 budget, deferred until today a decision on an amendment, offered by Representative George H. Mahon (D., Tex.), to boost the Air Force funds for new airplane purchases.

Marine Corps Keeps Present Status in Revised Measure

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Legislation to unify direction of the Nation's military forces was approved, 12 to 0, yesterday by the Senate Armed Services Committee.

With minor changes, the bill was the same as the compromise measure worked out by the Army and Navy and recommended by President Truman. The Senate's Republican leadership has agreed to put the bill on the calendar for consideration at this session, with debate expected to begin next month.

A similar measure has been the subject of hearings by the House Executive Expenditures Committee, which has not yet taken action.

Changes written into the compromise unification measure by the Senate committee include a guarantee that the Marine Corps will suffer "no alteration or diminution" of its relative status. It also was specified that the bill provides for "authoritative coordination and unified direction" of the armed forces "under civilian control" but not for a merger.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Army Chief of Staff, said in a letter to Chairman Gurney (R., N. Dak.) that despite the committee's changes n the bill:

Tragedy in D. C. Area

Four Men Take Own Lives, 3 by Hanging, 1 in Bridge Leap

Four men took their lives in the Washington area yesterday—three by hanging and the fourth by a leap from Taft Bridge over Rock Creek Park.

The dead, all pronounced suicides in official certificates, are:

Louis Wills, 30, of 1819 15th st. nw., a jewelry firm accountant, who plunged from Taft Bridge on Connecticut ave. nw. yesterday morning.

Leon W. Moffett, 64, of 5351 32d st. nw., a veteran Washington trade journal correspondent, whose body was found hanging in the basement of his home about 7:30 a. m.

E. Anderson Collier, 48, of 16 Sussex rd., Sligo Park Hills, Silver Spring, Md., an American Red Cross employe for 20 years. He was found hanged with a heavy cord in his basement at 6 p. m.

Ralph Killerlain, 22-year-old veteran, of 711 Sligo ave., Silver Spring, Md., who was found hanged in the basement of his home about 6 a. m.

By last night, District Coroner Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald and Maryland Medical Examiner Francis Broschart had issued certificates of suicide in all four deaths.

Wills, who lived for 30 minutes after his 100-foot plunge into the shallow water of Rock Creek, died in an ambulance en route to Emergency Hospital. He was found by Norman Jackson, 26, of 11 17th st. se., who told police he heard someone moaning as he walked along a footpath on the south bank of the creek.

Wills had been ill several months and at one time was treated at Gallinger Hospital. His wife, Grace, and their two children, a son 2 and daughter 7, were visiting at the home of her parents at the time of the death leap. Identification was made by Mrs. Wills' father, Meyer Wax, of 512 Randolph st. nw.

He had sold his store at 1819 15th st. nw., in April after becoming ill, but continued to live in apartments over his establishment. Recently he had worked in a downtown store.

Moffett was head of the news bureau of the Chilton Publications, trade journal publishers, for the last 21 years and had lived in Washington 34 years. A native of Kahoka, Mo., he had worked for newspapers in Denver, Des Moines and Pittsburgh. He was a member of the Masons, the Gunton Presbyterian Church, the National Press Club and the White House Correspondents Association.

Mrs. Mildred Moffett, his wife, told police he was not in bed when she awakened at 7 a. m. and after failing to find him in the house she called a neighbor, Azro R. Shepard, who found the body.

Associates at the Chilton offices said he had worked all day Tuesday on three articles.

Services will be held at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow from the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. He is survived by two sons, Harry

O'Dwyer Assails GOP; Tells 25,000 Enslavement of Workers Is Aim

By Robert S. Bird

New York, June 4.—In a slashing attack on the Republican Congress, Mayor William F. O'Dwyer told 25,000 cheering union members at Madison Square Garden tonight that the Taft-Hartley labor bill was designed to enslave the working man.

It would certainly cause a new depression, he asserted.

The mayor was keynote speaker at a "Veto Day" rally called by the American Federation of Labor to protest the labor bill and to demand its veto by President Truman.

Accusing the Republicans of sabotaging labor's gains under the New Deal, the mayor said the bill would disrupt unions in New York City, cause wages to tumble, swell the city's relief rolls, and generally raise havoc in a metropolis noted as a high wage center.

"Totalitarian Shot in Arm"

Interrupted time and again by cheers and whistles, he accused the Republicans of tying up labor in legal knots and ending all equality in bargaining power. He said the Taft-Hartley bill was a "shot in the arm for the advocates of totalitarianism," and a device for sowing discord, strikes and dissent.

The mayor shared the platform with a dozen other speakers who delivered blistering attacks on the labor bill.

They included William Green, president of the AFL, and a half dozen other labor leaders; and three United States Senators—Warren G. Magnuson, (D., Wash.); William Langer, (R., N. Dak.); and by proxy, Robert F. Wagner, (D., N. Y.). Senator Wagner, author of the National Labor Relations Act, was prevented by illness from attending, but he sent a speech that was read by his son, Robert F. Wagner, jr., New York City housing commissioner.

Sounds Rallying Cry

In words that were heard inside the Garden by 19,500 people and carried by loudspeakers to more than 5000 more filling 49th st., the mayor gave to labor this rallying cry:

"We must fight to protect this Nation from a bill inspired and

Police Find Man Dead in Auto in Soldiers' Home

Homicide squad detectives were investigating early today the death of a man in an automobile in a lonely wheat field in the United States Soldiers' Home Grounds.

The body, slumped over in the front seat of a car bearing Maryland tags, was found by a boy walking through the home grounds shortly after midnight. He called Soldiers' Home police.

When police arrived the body was still warm. A wound was found over the man's left eye. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald who came to the scene said the injury was not caused by either a knife or a gun.

He added he would not say "whether the death was due to violence, or not" until he performed an autopsy.

Police Lieut. Paul Sullivan, Tenth Precinct, said there was a woman's compact and several rose petals on the floor of the front seat of the car. The victim's hat and car keys were at his feet.

Labor, Tax Vetoes Urged By Wallace

Former Vice President Henry Wallace last night called for a presidential veto of the four billion dollar tax reduction bill and the conference-revised labor bill.

Of 13 national leaders queried by The Washington Post, Wallace was the eleventh to reply to these two questions:

1. Do you think the labor bill should or should not be finally enacted into law?

2. Do you think the tax reduction bill should or should not be finally enacted into law?

Wallace, who stopped briefly in Washington en route to Raleigh, N. C., to resume his speaking tour, called The Post to reply:

"I am strongly opposed to both bills and urge their veto."

Earlier, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.), another of the 13 queried in telegrams sent out last Friday, told The Post:

"My votes will reflect my attitude."

Senator Lodge voted for the conference-revised tax bill and for the Senate version of the labor bill. The conference-modified la-

Truman Gets Tax Cut Bill; Delays Action

Expected Veto to Be Deferred Until Monday at Earliest

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The four-billion-dollar tax reduction bill was delivered to the President yesterday amid official indications he will not act on it before Monday at the earliest.

The 10½ to 30 per cent reduction, which the President is expected to veto, will be discussed at a Cabinet meeting this afternoon, it was learned.

The completed legislation, signed yesterday by Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.) and Senate President Pro Tempore Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) was delivered to the White House about 1:35 p. m.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross told newsmen Mr. Truman will not act on the bill before he leaves for Kansas City Friday morning to address a meeting of his old World War I Thirty-fifth Division. Ross said he did not know whether the President will act before his slated trip to Canada, starting Monday.

Proposals Branded 'Phony'

Coal Talks Break Up as Union Objects to Publicity on Offer

United Mine Workers' discussions with southern coal operators were suspended for an indefinite period yesterday.

Union leaders, angry that the operators had publicly released the terms of their offer for a new coal contract, branded the proposals "phony." The miners' representatives failed to turn up at scheduled negotiating sessions.

The break-off in the talks mean that for the time being all coal negotiations are at a standstill. On Saturday, the union and the Northern operators stopped discussions, in an atmosphere more of regret than of anger, because they were unable to come closer together on contract terms.

These must be agreed upon by July 1, when the Government, now in possession of the Nation's mines, hands them back to their private owners. If no contracts are reached, the union may strike, under its usually-observed slogan of "no contract, no work."

The Southern group had proposed what amounted to about a 10 cents an hour wage increase, but had rejected the principle of portal-to-portal pay "as such." The Northern operators had agreed to continue paying for the hour or so the miners spend each day walking to and from the mine entrance to the place of work. Their wage offer was a 15 cents an hour increase.

The union, under John L. Lewis, is demanding 35 cents.

The suspension of all negotiations may mean a permanent collapse, with no hope of settlement before the July 1 deadline. But UMW-operators' negotiations traditionally have been marked by ups and downs, progress and stalemate, breakoffs and renewals, with the real negotiations usually conducted in the last 24 hours.

Hence it is impossible to forecast the outcome now. In Government circles yesterday there was still optimism.

UMW representatives said they had refused to continue the negotiations because the mine owners on Tuesday made public their wage proposals.

"It should be obvious to everyone that there is no use wasting time in a conference, talking over the operators' phony contract offer," a UMW statement said.

Senate Approval Assured; Norton Attack Brings Cat Calls, Wails

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

By an overwhelming vote of 320 to 79, the House yesterday passed the compromise labor bill. It goes immediately to the Senate and will probably be acted upon there today.

Its passage in the Senate is assured, but not by the landslide ratio—better than four to one—of yesterday's House vote. The majority exceeded even the optimistic three to one forecast of Chairman Hartley (R., N. J.) of the House Labor Committee, floor manager for the bill.

Before the House passed the measure, it rejected a motion by Representative Lesinski (D., Mich.) to send it back to the Senate-House conference committee. The score, by a standing vote, was 246 to 55.

Bitterly Opposed by Unions

The bill, described by its proponents as "fair and moderate," is bitterly opposed by almost all labor groups on grounds that it places severe restrictions on their union activities. It constitutes a major revision of the Wagner Act and the first ever made since that law's passage on July 5, 1935.

The bill will almost certainly reach the White House by the end of this week. There, its fate is uncertain. In congressional circles, however, and in some executive departments the speculation that Mr. Truman will veto the measure has been mounting.

This view gained additional weight yesterday when House Democratic Leader Rayburn (Tex.) condemned the bill as not "fair," and voted against it. Although he had previously voted against the version of the measure as it first passed the House, he had hitherto been silent on the much milder draft which emerged as a compromise from the joint conference committee.

Regarded as Tip-off

Earlier in the day, he and Senate Democratic Leader Barkley (Ky.) had stayed behind with President Truman for a few moments after a White House visit of the congressional "Big Six." There was speculation, though no real evidence, that he had checked his views with the President. In any event, his negative vote was generally interpreted as a "tip-off" on ultimate White House action.

Yesterday's vote showed that 105 Democrats had joined 217 Republicans in favoring the bill. Far fewer Democrats, only 66, opposed it. Voting with them were 12 GOP members and 1 American-Laborite, Representative Marcantonio (N.Y.).

The hour allotted to debate before the vote was an acrimonious one. It was marked by one of the House's rather rare instances of cat-calling.

Target of Shrill Wails

The target of the shrill wails was Representative Mary T. Norton (D., N. J.), chairman of the House Labor Committee for many years under Democratic Administration. A few weeks ago in the course of House debate on the bill, she had described her successor, Hartley, as a man for whom she had no "respect."

When she took the floor yesterday a few cat-calls went up from the Republican side. By the time she finished a brief speech, in which she implied that those favoring the bill were "labor baiters and labor haters," the howls had grown to a loud chorus.

She said that the National Association of Manufacturers had written the bill "for their own profit and found a subservient Republican committee ready and anxious to do their bidding."

Representative Hoffman (R., Mich.), who has taken the view that the measure is far too mild, sought unsuccessfully to have it sent back to conference on a point of order. He claimed that the conference committee had exceeded its rights and had written new legislation, not appearing in either the original House or Senate versions of the measure.

Speaker Martin (R., Mass.) ruled that this was an ancient, but in-

Soviet Bars Inspection In Hungary

By Jack Guinn

Budapest, June 4 (AP).—Soviet Lieut. Gen. V. P. Sviridov has refused permission for a high ranking American officer to inspect military installations of Hungary, a former enemy country, American spokesmen disclosed today.

The Soviet action raised speculation that the Russians may already be taking a hand in training the Hungarian army.

At the same time, the American Legation, retaliating for lack of American Civil Aviation rights over Hungary, formally notified the Communist-dominated government that planes of the Russian-Hungarian transport company no longer would be permitted to fly over United States zones in Germany and Austria.

The new policy went into effect yesterday when a planeload of prominent Hungarian Social Democrats, including the ministry of industry, was denied clearance to fly to a Socialist conference in Switzerland. The party left today by train.

Meanwhile, best available sources reported these other developments in a rumor-ridden capital:

A sudden boom in the demand for radios which would receive foreign news broadcasts.

An increased demand for automobiles capable of getting at least as far as the Austrian border, where the patrol had been almost doubled.

A reliable informant said Father Istvan Bolagh, secretary general of the Small Landholders Party and close friend of ousted Premier Ferenc Nagy, had been threatened with jail unless he retires from politics and enters a monastery. He is a Catholic priest. The informant said he had been threatened with prosecution for a "financial arrangement."

Budapest's mayor, another friend of Nagy, was slated to be replaced.

A Small Landholder member of Parliament said Communists were preparing legislation which would outlaw criticism of their three-year economic plan.

American spokesmen said Col. John H. Stokes, jr., of San Francisco, executive officer of the United States Military Mission, asked War Minister Lajos Dinnyes, now the new pro-Communist premier, for permission to inspect a Hungarian division. Ordinarily such a request would be a mere formality in view of relations between a victor nation and a defeated former enemy.

To Stokes' surprise, however, Dinnyes replied that such a visit would have to be approved by the Allied Control Commission.

Sviridov, acting chairman of the Allied Control Commission, without consulting the American member of the commission, replied that the proposed inspection would be impossible.

It was recalled here that the Russians on two different occasions in the past year offered to train and equip the Hungarian army. When the Communists sprang their coup last week, ousting Naby and replacing him with Dinnyes, reliable political informants said the change would result in Hungary's now accepting the offer.

Move Held Unlikely, Though It Would Hamper Guerillas

Athens, June 4 (U.P.).—Sophocles Venizelos, president of the Greek cabniet's Council of National Defense, today agreed with the "suggestion" that American troops in Greece would "serve to discourage aid from abroad" to the guerillas.

The "suggestion" with which he agreed has been made privately in government circles, although there was none who believed the United States was willing to send troops to Greece now.

Venizelos, who also is Minister of the Navy, said in an interview that the Greek army, if doubled in size and equipped with American funds could handle the situation. But now, he said, the army was about half the size it should be to handle the guerillas.

He repeated previously circulated reports that 10,000 guerillas of unspecified nationalities in Bulgaria and Yugoslavia were being equipped by those nations to fight in Greece.

He charged that the recent guerilla attacks near the Yugoslav frontier were designed to secure an area in which to establish a guerilla government.

[In Belgrade, the Yugoslav official agency Tanjug today denied press reports from Athens that an international brigade was being organized at Split to help the Greek guerillas.]

Dead Veterans' Dependents Paid 32 Million Monthly

Nearly 879,000 dependents of deceased veterans of all wars and peacetime services are receiving compensation from the Veterans Administration at the rate of 32 million dollars a month, VA announced yesterday.

The announcement said 396,000, or more than 45 per cent, are dependents of deceased veterans of World War II. Of this number, all but 3525 are receiving compensation as the result of service-connected deaths. Dependents of World War I veterans number 363,000, or 41 per cent.

The administration also said living veterans receiving compensation now number 2,328,000. Their benefit checks total approximately 114 million dollars a month.

Thomas M. Raysor Elected Chairman of Junior Bar

Raysor

Thomas M. Raysor, 34, 802 Wayne st., Arlington, was elected chairman of the junior bar section of the District Bar Association at a luncheon yesterday.

John C. Poole was elected vice chairman, while John L. Grabber was chosen secretary-treasurer. In the election to fill three vacancies on the executive council, G. Bowdoin Craighill, jr., and Miss Norma Hatfield were chosen, while Edward J. Hickey, jr., and John Kendrick were tied for third.

Raysor, a member of the firm of Cromelin, Townsend & Kirkland, was born in San Antonio, Tex., and was educated in the District grade schools, Central High School and George Washington University, receiving his A. B. and LL.B from Harvard College and Harvard Law School.

After starting his practice here in 1937, he was employed by the Army Engineers for 15 months in Alaska, then at the atom project in Oak Ridge, Tenn. He resumed his practice in 1945.

Defies Recall by Communists

trol Council which may be of interest to them.

In this case the information is decidedly of interest, for it has been assumed here that pressure from Sviridov led to Nagy's dismissal.

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill, the Hungarian upset echoed loudly throughout the second day of Senate debate on the ratification of the peace treaties with Italy, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria.

Opponents of ratification had a field day, although Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), minority leader of the Foreign Relations Committee, predicted that not more than 12 votes would be cast against the treaties when they come up for a vote this afternoon.

If it had not been for Hungarian developments, opposition to the treaties probably would have been listless and routine.

As it was, Senators Eastland (D., Miss.), Bridges (R., N. H.) and Wherry (R., Nebr.) delivered vigorous attacks on the treaties as appeasement of Soviet Russia and as invitations to a Communist seizure of power in Italy.

Eastland charged the Hungarian coup was "inspired, directed and imposed by the Soviet army," and the new Premier "was placed in office by the Russian military commander."

Mere protests, he said, would be "weak and futile." He said ratification of the Hungarian treaty would serve Soviet rather than American interests, and demanded that the United States refer the Hungarian case to the Security Council of the United Nations.

"Hungary is slated to be a Russian vassal and she is deprived of her independence," said Eastland. He accused Russia of violating the Yalta agreement and of practicing against Hungary "the same kind of aggression Hitler practiced against Czechoslovakia and other countries."

Bridges, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, concentrated on the Italian treaty, calling it a violation of American promises and a danger to American military, economic and political interests.

He protested especially against the reparations clauses of the treaty, saying they would prevent Italy from becoming self-supporting.

"If we ratify the treaty and then help Italy in the interests of world recovery," said Bridges, "Uncle Sam will pour in dollars at one end of the Italian funnel, while Russia and her satellites will drain off these dollars in the form of reparations at the other end."

He predicted that the new Free Territory of Trieste would fail to survive, and that new danger spots would be created around the Adriatic and Mediterranean.

Above all, said Bridges, the treaty would play into the hands of Russia by "keeping Italy in subservience, in a constant condition of turmoil, until the Russian dominated Communists under Togliatti gain control of the land."

Wherry, in a speech that lasted almost two hours, said the Senate had never had a chance to consider a message from the president of the Italian Constituent Assembly calling for revision of the treaty.

Vandenberg, to whom the message had been addressed, said he thought its text had been included in the printed record of the Foreign Relations Committee's hearings. In any case, said Vandenberg, it had been made available to the press on March 2, the day it was received.

Wherry also complained that Soviet Russia gained far more than the United States in the treaty negotiations—a point which Connally, one of the negotiators, promised to answer when debate is resumed today.

"In the light of the Communist usurpation of power in Hungary," said Wherry, "we must ask ourselves 'What if a similar thing should happen in Italy? What would happen to our 400 million dollar program in Greece and Turkey?'

"Ratification of this treaty would jeopardize our 400 million dollar investment by opening Italy to Marshal Tito's infiltration and putting Italy behind the Iron Curtain."

Senator Thye (R., Minn.) asked whether Wherry had an alternative to ratification. Wherry replied he would keep the status quo "until we see what happens in Germany, Austria and Hungary."

Just before adjournment Vandenberg announced he would try to split today's debate evenly between proponents and opponents of ratification. A vote has been scheduled by two o'clock this afternoon.

Some of the closing arguments are expected to draw upon the dramatic statement issued yesterday by the Hungarian Minister and his colleagues. The diplomats said:

"Hungary today is occupied by the Soviet Army and controlled by its agents, who are making every effort to consolidate their grip over the country in order to remain in power at the time of the Russian evacuation following ratification of the peace treaties."

The treaty with Hungary provides for the evacuation of Soviet troops, except for those maintaining comunications with Vienna, within 90 days after it becomes effective.

The minister and his colleagues admitted that the process of Soviet control in Hungary "cannot be stopped by the internal democratic forces in Hungary." Nevertheless, they expressed confidence that normal conditions could be restored as soon as the Hungarian people are given the opportunity to express their will "freely."

Atomic Race Has Started, U. S. Tells U. N.

Lake Success, June 4 (AP).—The United States warned today that an atomic arms race is on and charged that a system of atomic control advocated by Russia would be a "fraud on the peoples of the world."

The United States said, furthermore, that such a system would breed antagonism, distrust and suspicion and increase the danger of atomic war.

Frederick H. Osborn, United States deputy on the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission, made it clear that his country would exert every effort to maintain its ranking position on atomic armaments until satisfactory international controls were agreed upon.

He said large atomic operations were going on in Canada, England and Russia as well as the United States.

Osborn spoke at a closed meeting of the political committee of the U. N. Atomic Commission after conferring yesterday in Washington with State Department officials. His language was some of the sharpest so far heard in the year-long deliberations of the atomic commission.

SPECIAL NOTICES

A SPECIAL MEETING of the stockholders of the Potomac Insurance Company of the District of Columbia is called and will be held in the Board Room of the National Metropolitan Bank of Washington, 613 15th Street, N.W., Washington, D. C., on Tuesday, the 24th day of June, 1947, at 3 o'clock p. m., to vote upon the question of whether or not the company shall avail itself of the provisions of Section 101 of Title 29 of the District of Columbia Code, to the end that the company, without surrendering or relinquishing any of the powers originally granted by the Special Act of Congress approved on the 2nd day of March, 1831, may be entitled to the privileges and provisions and be subject to the liabilities pertaining to fire, marine and casualty insurance companies in the District of Columbia, and thereby have and acquire all of the powers permitted under Section 1314, Sub-Paragraphs (1) and (2) of Title 35 of Said District of Columbia Code, but thereby surrendering and relinquishing the power and authority granted by the Act of Congress approved March 3, 1837, "to make Insurance on lives, to grant annuities, to receive endowments and to contract for reversionary payments"; and also to vote upon the question of whether the company shall avail itself of the provisions of Section 237 of said Title 29 of said District of Columbia Code, to the end that the term of existence of said company shall be perpetual; and also to vote upon the increase of the authorized capital of the company from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000; and to authorize the officers of the company to take all such steps as may be necessary and proper to effectuate the foregoing.

Early Action Asked On UMT Proposal

President Truman yesterday urged Congress to give prompt consideration to universal military training as a means toward security and ultimate world peace.

His request was contained in a letter to Senate President Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and Speaker of the House Martin (R., Mass.), transmitting the report of his commission on universal training. "It is significant," Mr. Truman wrote, "that the members of the commission consisting of outstanding Americans in various fields of endeavor unanimously recommend the adoption of universal training."

"I'm for It"—Gurney

Meanwhile, chairmen of armed services committees in both Houses indicated the subject would be taken up in early hearings.

Senator Gurney (R., N. Dak.), chairman of the Senate Committee, said he would take the matter up with his committee Tuesday.

"Personally," he said, "I'm for it—as strong as horseradish."

Chairman Andrews of the House committee already had announced that hearings before his committee would begin "in a week or 10 days."

The President in his letter pointed out that he had appointed the commission to make an exhaustive study of the subject "on which it was obvious there was great disparity of viewpoint."

"Excellent Report"

It had rendered, he said, an "excellent" report and called attention to its conclusion that universal training was:

"An essential element in an integrated program of national security designed to protect the United States against possible aggression, to perpetuate the freedom for which millions shed their blood, and to hasten the advent of universal disarmament and peace through the United Nations."

The commission recommended a program under which all able-bodied young men would be required to serve six months in camp or at sea, with an additional six months in a reserve component of the armed forces or its equivalent. Training would begin, under the recommendation, at 18 or upon completion of high school.

its present form presents a thoroughly practicable organization of the armed services which will permit us with increased economy and efficiency to do our part in the preservation of the peace and, if need be, in the prosecution of war.

"I wish to reiterate my previous statement to your committee that early action on this legislation is necessary in order that we may get on with the important task of planning and preparing the armed services to meet the requirements of our national security."

Gurney said Gen. A. A. Vandegrift, Marine Corps commandant, whose opposition to the original bill had brought about inclusion of the clause guaranteeing integrity of the Marine Corps, appeared to be satisfied.

Navy Not Heard From

"He was here when that provision was written in, Gurney said, "and he gave a nod of approval and said he was happy."

Only the Navy, which had been converted to the present partial step toward unification only by wholesale concessions on the Army's part, was not heard from. Gurney said, however, that he expected a letter of approval from Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Chief of Naval Operations.

Nine members of the 13-man committee attended yesterday's executive meeting and three members voted for the bill by telephone. Senator Robertson (R., Wyo.), who had vigorously opposed the measure, was not present and did not vote.

Republicans voting for the bill were Senators Gurney, Bridges, N. H.; Wilson, Iowa; Saltonstall, Mass.; Morse, Oreg.; Baldwin, Conn. Democrats were Senators Tydings, Md.; Russell, Ga.; Byrd, Va.; Hill, Ala.; Kilgore, W. Va. and Maybank, S. C.

Gurney said Bridges and "others" had reserved the right to oppose parts of the bill on the floor of the Senate and to offer amendments. Robertson already had proposed a substitute for the entire bill and was expected to carry his fight to the floor.

At the last minute a provision was added which would authorize the Army and Navy to continue their wartime organizations for another two years unless changed by executive order. The Army, in 1942, discarded its archaic system of branches in favor of a simpler and handier system of ground, air and service forces. The Navy brought its formerly autonomous bureaus under direct control of the Chief of Naval Operations.

Another last-minute amendment changed the name of the over-all military establishment from "National Security Establishment" to "National Security Organization." Gurney said the change was suggested by Baldwin, who considered the term "establishment" to "sound too military."

As now written, the measure establishes a national security organization headed by a secretary of national security with Cabinet rank. Within this organization would be departments of the Army, the Navy and Air Force, each headed by a secretary without Cabinet status. All these officials would be civilians, appointed by the President.

Additional units of the security organization would be:

1. A national security council headed by the President and including the secretaries of the services, to advise the President on military policy.

2. A war council, composed of the four secretaries and the Chiefs of Staff of the Army and the Air Force and the Chief of Naval Operations, to advise the secretary of national security on military policy.

3. A munitions board to coordinate procurement, production and distribution and composed of a chairman appointed by the President, and an undersecretary or assistant secretary from each of the three departments.

4. A research and development board, consisting of a chairman named by the President and two representatives from each department to advise on scientific and engineering research.

5. Joint Chiefs of Staff to prepare strategic and logistical plans and formulate policies for unified command and joint training.

There would also be a national security resources board to coordinate supply of materials, and a central intelligence agency under the security council.

Big Iceberg Reported In Atlantic Ship Lanes

By The Associated Press

The Coast Guard cutter Mendota is investigating a large iceberg about 1260 miles east of New York City in steamer lanes now in use by ships bound to and from Europe, the Coast Guard reported yesterday. Spokesmen said the berg is a "menace," particularly in view of the dense fog that usually surrounds the area.

Spruille Braden Resigns From State Department

SPRUILLE BRADEN

or clear-cut as had been reported, but they were nevertheless too serious for Braden to stay in the Secretary's official family.

The real dispute was not over whether to be "tough" or "soft" toward the Peron government. Braden insisted that Argentina must comply with her promises to expel agents; so did Secretaries Byrnes and Marshall, and for that matter the President himself.

The real dispute concerned the extent of Argentina's compliance. Braden regarded the Peron government as a dictatorship of a Fascist type, and refused to take any of its assurances at their face value.

Vandenberg Pressure

The rest of the Administration, however, became more and more disposed to accept Argentina's anti-Axis actions in good faith. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg added his pressure to that of Messersmith and others in the State Department.

The War Department strongly urged a resumption of the inter-American defense negotiations, and finally persuaded Secretary Marshall and the President to advocate the sale of arms to Argentina as well as to other Latin American republics. Their argument was that if the United States did not supply the arms and train the armies in Latin America, some other major power might do so.

Braden is known to have disagreed with President Truman's recent renewal of his plea for the sale of arms to Latin America. The meeting at the White House with the Argentine Ambassador appears to have been the last straw.

Colorful Personality

His resignation removes a colorful and hard-hitting personality from the State Department. Braden was a mining engineer and businessman before he entered the diplomatic service in 1938.

His diplomatic career reached a spectacular climax when he became Ambassador to Argentina in May, 1945, the month of Germany's surrender in Europe. Braden virtually campaigned in public against Peron as pro-Fascist and pro-Nazi.

The eventual outcome, however, was Peron's triumphant election as President of Argentina, and a crescendo of criticism in this country against Braden for having interfered in Argentine affairs.

At first President Truman and Secretary Byrnes took Braden's side, bringing him to Washington as Assistant Secretary of State. He continued his outspokenness in Washington, incurring the displeasure of Senator Vandenberg, former Undersecretary Sumner Welles, and many of the so-called professionals in American diplomacy in Latin America.

Now that Braden has resigned, the next step in Latin American diplomacy will be to poll the other American republics and to determine whether they want to hold the Rio conference. This will show, in effect, whether they consider Argentina has complied with her promises and can now be accepted as a member of the conference in good standing.

"Logical Development"

Buenos Aires, Argentina, June 4 (AP).—Argentine government sources said today the resignation of Spruille Braden as assistant secretary of state was a "logical development" in a series of steps leading to closer relations between the United States and Argentina.

Government sources, tracing the rapprochement between Washington and Buenos Aires in the year Peron has been president, gave a large measure of credit to George Messersmith, present U. S. ambassador here.

Wool Bill Conferees Remain Deadlocked

By The Associated Press

The controversial wool bill remained deadlocked yesterday when Senate and House conferees failed to compromise their differences on the measure.

Representative Hope (R., Kans.), chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said that there is no prospect that either group will give in immediately on the question of import fees.

House Defeats New Attempt To Cut Strength of Army

sentative Albert J. Engel (Rep., Mich.), insisted that the President and the Secretary of War had lopped far more from Air Force funds without a protest being raised.

Engel said he hadn't heard "a squeak . . . squawk or a squeal" when the President froze 75 million dollars of Air Force funds or when the War Department transferred 135 million dollars from the Air Force to meet the Army payroll.

It's only when Congress does the cutting that "the squeals" start, Engel shouted angrily.

Mahon insisted that the 40-million-dollar cut will mean a reduction of 932 to 561 in the number of new planes to be ordered next year.

Engel retorted that Army officers were giving different sets of figures to the Appropriations Committee and Democratic House members. He accused Army officers of "lobbying" for the increase from the House Gallery.

Engel said the Air Force will have carry-over funds from last year and contract authority which will bring the actual money available to 720 million dollars next year.

The debate was enlivened by a shouted argument over how many planes Russia might be racing to build behind the Iron Curtain.

"If anyone can discover what Russia is doing behind the Iron Curtain," Engel shouted, "he will be doing this Nation a great service to disclose it."

Jumping to their feet angry Democrats chorused that if this country does not know how many planes Russia is building it had better build plenty of its own.

Asserting that the 40 million slash is not a political question, Engel disclosed that about an equal number of Republicans and Democrats on the Appropriations Committee favored the slash.

During the debate, Chairman Walter G. Andrews (R., N. Y.) of the House Committee on Armed Services disclosed that his committee soon will report legislation calling for permanent and sharp cuts in officer strength of the Regular Army.

The bill would make a sweeping reduction in the number of high-ranking officers, committee members said.

While the House battled over the military supply bill, the Senate geared for a fight on GOP-directed cuts in funds for the Agriculture Department.

Protests have been flooding the desks of both Democrats and Republicans on the cut in funds for soil conservation. Protests are coming from nearly every State in the Union.

The Legislature in the Republican stronghold of Vermont, for example, unanimously adopted a resolution asking Congress not to slash the funds for the soil conservation program.

Senator Elmer Thomas and other Oklahoma Democrats said they had received hundreds of letters from farmers in their State protesting the cuts.

Hollywood Red Inquiry To Begin Here in Fall

The House Committee on Un-American Activities announced yesterday that open hearings in its general investigation of alleged Communist influences in Hollywood will begin in Washington next September.

The committee also announced postponement until September of a hearing to question Hans Eisler, Hollywood music composer and brother of Gerhart Eisler. Gerhart Eisler has been identified at previous committee hearings as one of the leaders of Communism in this country.

Compromise Labor Measure Passed by House, 320 to 79

valid complaint. He said that the committee had a wide discretion, being bound only to produce provisions which were "germane" to the subject.

Hartley took the lead in defending the bill, as rendering "a service to the Nation, to labor and to the general public."

In a prepared statement issued earlier in the day, he declared that if the President vetoed the bill, "no doubt will exist that the CIO is again the major political power at the White House."

He complained that while it was preparing the bill, the Congress "has been subjected to a campaign of vilification and intimidation unparallel in congressional history."

Does Some Name-Calling

In return, he did a spot of name-calling himself, in pinning the Communist tag to the CIO. He said that a veto would show, that "the CIO is again calling the tune and the President is not playing 'The Missouri Waltz' but something which sounds suspiciously like 'The Internationale.'"

Lesinski, ranking Democratic member of the Labor Committee, led the fight against the bill. He forecast that if it became law, it would ultimately be repealed.

The peoples of America, he shouted, "will not tolerate for long a legislative grant of special privilege."

"A natural right cannot long be suppressed without the aid of force," he went on. "Are we willing to suppress his (workingman's) rights, and if so, will we be willing at a later date to tolerate the conflicts that result, or the alternative to provide the force that will be necessary to keep him suppressed?"

Called License to Oppress

The bill's advocates "prate of power, but here license the powerful to oppress the working man," he said.

"They speak out against concentration of Government authority, but here create an agency with more power over labor and management than ever before in history . . .

"The hope of America is in tomorrow, and that this evil thing will, mark my words, shortly be undone."

Joining Hoffman in his complaint that the original House bill corrected labor abuses much more effectively, Representative Buck (R., N. Y.) said he would nevertheless vote for the conference version because it was better than no bill at all.

More bitterly, Hoffman said that the statements made against the bill were "arrant nonsense." The conference measure was, in fact, "a gift of Congress to unions and union leaders" and did not truly protect public health, welfare and safety, he said.

Barden Strikes Back

Representative Barden (D., N. C.) struck back bitterly at Mrs. Norton. He said, "Before I would dub three fourths of this chamber 'labor baiters and labor haters,' before I would pay that price, I would walk out of that door never to return."

In a last minute plea for passage, Majority Leader Halleck (Ind.) hailed the measure as "fair, decent and courageous." Since more Democrats approved it than opposed it, he argued, it could be considered bipartisan legislation, and hence gave no occassion for presidential veto.

written by the representatives of privilege and designed once more to enslave the American working man."

"I dread another economic failure," he said. "I firmly believe that the Taft-Hartley bill is intended to destroy and will destroy, if it becomes law, the guaranties of economic stability—and will result in another national depression."

The rally was one of the best staged in the Garden in years. Promptly at 4 o'clock, the union people swarmed to the Garden bearing placards and pennants. They came in such numbers as almost to swamp the 140 police.

On 49th st., an AFL band, seated in the middle of the blocked-off street, played, while, inside an orchestra rendered more classical music as the crowds were being deployed for an hour or more into seats.

Over the main stage hung a great sign, blazoning in letters 4 feet high labor's demand: "Mr. President: Veto the Hartley-Taft slave labor bill!"

Other slogans said, "Mein Kampf is written into Taft-Hartley bill," and "Save your unions—fight the open shop!"

At 4:45 p. m. the fire department ordered the doors closed and more than 5000 people had to remain outside.

At 5:15 p. m., Green and most of the other speakers mounted the platform amid a great ovation.

Thereafter, for nearly three hours, the loudspeakers poured forth a torrent of abuse on the Republican sponsors of the labor bill, and the crowds inside and outside helped the speakers along with yells and boos and scornful laughter.

Occasionally matters got a bit mixed up—as when David Dubinsky, head of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, offended a number of Communists in the audience by saying the labor bill was a "recruiting agent for the Communists." A roar of boos, intermingled by cheers, nearly drowned him out.

Every mention of Congress and the Republicans was booed, except when the Senators were speaking. They got a rousing reception, and even Senator Langer's mention of the Republicans was received with polite restraint.

Before Green was introduced, all lights in the garden were dimmed and the great sign hanging over the speakers' platform suddenly shone forth in a weird luminosity, which caused everybody to cheer and whistle some more.

The speakers denounced big business in general, and the National Association of Manufacturers in particular, for fathering the labor bill. They charged that it would boomerang on its sponsors, first by encouraging strife and communism, and next by turning labor's vote against congressional members who voted for it.

They depicted it as placing government in the role of labor's enemy, as threatening to swamp the Federal labor machinery beyond hope of remedy, of striking at the Nation's basic economy, and as leading to chaos in the country.

Magnuson urged the crowd to "turn those boos into writing," saying that a "letter to the President will make him feel the force of American public opinion." He called the legislation the "Taft-heartless bill," which dealt not with labor management but "with labor-mangling."

Langer assured the union audience that some people in Congress were friendly to labor, and said that the farmers of the country had a stake in the bill too, and "are just as interested in seeing the bill vetoed as you are."

"Don't forget the Republicans who voted against that labor bill," he pleaded.

Wagner's speech said the enemies of labor had adopted a new approach, calling themselves "moderates."

"Imagine saying that labor has too much power," he said, "when labor and its friends couldn't even succeed in persuading this reactionary Congress to maintain price control, or increase the minimum wage, or pass a health and educational aid program, or legislate more effective control and regulation of monopoly, or enact an equitable tax program."

Green charged that the bill was "inspired by fear," and that "the enemies of labor are afraid of true democracy, frightened by the voice of labor demanding its rights."

The noisiest ovation was reserved for the Mayor, who mounted the platform as the band played "Hail to the Chief" and "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

He charged that the Republicans were deliberately trying to diminish labor's gains since 1937, when average wages for employes rose from $20.13 a week to $47.44 a week. The label "Republicans" resounded in every paragraph of his speech.

"Approval Day" Demanded

New York, June 4 (AP).—Mayor William O'Dwyer's designation of today as an official "day of protest" against the Taft-Hartley labor bill drew a demand today that he issue another proclamation designating Friday as a "day of approval" for the bill.

The demand was made in a letter to the Mayor by the Commerce and Industry Association, Inc., which said it made its request for another protest "on behalf of the many business and working men's groups in the city who believe that enactment of the Taft-Hartley bill is not only desirable but necessary to preserve the national economy."

Wallace Asks Two Vetoes

bor bill has not yet reached a Senate vote.

The two delayed replies, together with the earlier answers reported in Wednesday's Post, recorded 11 national leaders widely regarded as Presidential possibilities as follows:

Eight want the tax bill to become law and eight want the labor bill enacted. Three think the tax bill should not become law and three believe the labor bill should not be approved.

Of the 13 queried, only Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Gov. Earl Warren of California declined comment.

The seven Republicans responding were as a unit in favoring enactment of both the tax reduction and labor bill, with only this variation. Former Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota suggested the President confer with congressional leaders, and agree on the amount of the tax cut.

The other Republican leaders favoring both tax reduction and labor legislation were Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), Senator John W. Bricker (R., Ohio), Senator Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.) and Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.).

12 Die as Lake Freighter Hits Rocks, Sinks

Fort William, Ontario, June (AP). Twelve crew members, including three women, perished before dawn today when the fog-beset Canadian freighter Emperor rammed into Lake Superior rocks and sank.

It was the worst Great Lakes shipping disaster in five years.

Twenty-one survivors were plucked from overturned and sinking lifeboats or from the cold rocks off lonely Isle Royale, a United States national park jutting up in the bleak Lake Superior 48 miles from the tip of northern Michigan.

The vessel, one of about 75 operated by Canada Steamship Lines, normally carried a crew of 35, but two men remained behind when she left Port Arthur, Ontario, Tuesday night. She was bound for Ashtabula, Ohio.

The body of a woman cook, Mrs. Edna Schultz of Owen Sound, Ontario, was recovered before Coast Guard surface ships and planes launched a search for the other 11 victims.

Capt. Eldon Walkinshaw of Collingwood, Ontario, 61-year-old veteran of 38 years on the lakes, was among those drowned. His first mate and second engineer went down with him.

An unestimated number of the victims were sucked down into the racing vortex of the sinking 7000-ton Emperor, which overturned one of two lifeboats attempting to clear the stricken vessel.

An 18-year-old coal passer, Ernest Albrecht, youngest of the survivors, described the scene as he waited to board a lifeboat.

Skipper Lost With Freighter

CAPT. ELDON WALKINSHAW
Down With His Ship

"The ship gave a lunge and water came gushing over like a waterfall," he said from his hospital bed. "The port lifeboat was thrown against a bulkhead, with several persons in it.

"I thought my time had come . . .

"The next thing I knew I was in the water, floating with the (life) jacket. I couldn't swim in that water, it was so cold, so I drifted to an overturned lifeboat and hung on until I saw the American Coast Guard cutter coming."

The 525-foot steel ore ship, built in Collingwood in 1910, went down in about 50 feet of water.

Not since 1942, when 25 persons drowned in the sinking of a launch in Georgian Bay, 14 in a tug disaster and 18 in a Lake Erie barge, had the Great Lakes exacted such a toll.

March of Dimes Winners on Trip

A happy four-car motor caravan of 22 kids, winners in the March of Dimes contest last January at the Rockville Elementary School, journeyed to Mount Vernon yesterday.

A few parents and Miss Elizabeth Banks, fifth grade teacher at the school, accompanied the winners, who collected more than $15 apiece toward the infantile paralysis fund.

The school collected over $1000, more than any other school in the county or State, Miss Banks said.

Annapolis Woman Found Dead in Home

Annapolis, Md., June 4 (AP).—Mrs. Alverta Carey, 35, was found dead in her home here early today, apparently beaten to death, Annapolis police reported.

Patrolman J. W. Moreland said her husband, Nason, 45, had reported her death.

32 Hurt as Bomber Burns

Columbus, Ohio, June 4 (AP).—Thirty-two Navy enlister men were reported burned today—two seriously—in fighting fire which destroyed a $200,000 torpedo bomber and damaged a hangar at the naval air station at Port Columbus Airfield today. Twelve of the enlisted men were hospitalized.

Eisler Denied Another Judge

being tried for communism, but for refusing to testify before the House committee.

Appears Unperturbed

Eisler appeared unperturbed as he heard Representative Thomas and other Government witnesses testify how Eisler refused to be sworn as a witness before the House committee until he had first been permitted to read a statement.

Smartly dresed in a gray suit and blue shirt and tie ensemble, the 51-year-old German Communist frequently glanced at his wife, Brunhilda, 34, with whom he arrived in this country in 1941 as refugees. She was handsomely gowned in bourgeoise black and wore a triple strand of "pearls."

In the nearby courtroom of Justice Richmond B. Keech, Leon Josephson, who was also charged with contempt for failing to appear before the committee on the same day, pleaded for dismissal of the indictment. It was contrary to the Constitution, his attorney declared. A similar plea was made for Eugene Dennis, secretary of the Communist Party, who is also charged with contempt of Congress.

Little Except "No"

Representative Thomas told of Eisler's refusal to testify. In substance, he said, "I don't recall Eisler saying anything very much except no," when he was asked to testify.

Thomas was excused for the afternoon session, but the cross-examination will continue today. Assistant U. S. Attorney William Hitz said he would close the Government's case after that cross-examination.

Similar testimony was given by Robert E. Stripling, chief investigator for the House Committee.

Jury Carefully Selected

The jury of seven women and five men was selected after vigorous questioning by Justice Holtzoff to eliminate those with bias. Three were eleminated after selection by peremptory challenges of the defense. They are Frank Dean, a salesman living at 1417 N st. nw., who said he believed in the American Legion stand to exclude aliens.

Another was David D. Druskin, 4824 New Hampshire ave., an employe of the Central Intelligence Group. The third was Cecil A. Gordon, 3206 5th st. se., a Naval Research Laboratory electrician.

'Murder by Mail' Plot Laid to Jewish Band

London, June 4 (AP).—Scotland Yard disclosed today that several prominent Britons had received through the mail envelopes containing a watch-like mechanism and a bag of explosive powder—a plot that London papers immediately dubbed "murder by post."

The carefully made booby traps were mailed from Italy. The British Press Association said the missives apparently were "another attempt by Jewish terrorists to intimidate responsible people in Britain."

None of the envelopes exploded, because the recipients all became suspicious when they found a bulky cream-colored packet enclosed within the outer cover.

Scotland Yard declined to name the persons who received the explosives. However, Maj. Gen. Edward Spears, foe of Zionism and prominent advocate of the Arab cause in the Middle East, voluntarily disclosed that he was one of the recipients.

Spears said he could "jolly well guess" that the envelopes came from a Jewish underground organization in Italy, where the stern gang recently claimed responsibility for an explosion in the British embassy.

The British Press Association reported that one of the packets was addressed to Sir Stafford Cripps, head of the board of trade, and the Evening Standard said another was sent to Field Marshal Lord Montgomery, chief of the Imperial General Staff.

[United Press reported that in addition to Cripps, other Cabinet Ministers receiving the letters included Minister Without Portfolio Arthur Greenwood and Food Minister John Strachey.—Editor's Note.]

The British Press Association said the envelopes were still arriving and "it is expected that most of the cabinet as well as leading figures in high administrative positions will be receiving these missives."

Admission of Refugees Asked

into the problem of Europe's 800,000 or so displaced persons, Stratton insisted that this country has a "moral obligation" to support the determination of those who will not return to Communist-dominated lands.

Gossett Questions

Admission of a "fair share" of these persons to the United States, Stratton said is the only "logical, humane and practical alternative to either letting the refugees starve or maintaining them indefinitely at a cost to this country of 182 million dollars a year.

The committee got a preview of the opposition the Stratton bill will meet in questions of Representative Ed Gossett (D., Tex.)

Gossett charged that Europe's camps are full of "Communists and crackpots." He said the United States had already "skimmed the cream off these refugees" by admitting various scientists and ministers.

Quotes Governor Dewey

Stratton quoted Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York as saying that the problem of displaced persons was "the problem of humanity itself."

Angrily, Gossett charged that both parties were playing politics on the issue. (The Administration is supporting the Stratton bill.)

"Both parties are catering to the foreign-bloc vote," Gossett declared. "Both parties are trying to outdo themselves with the large foreign-bloc vote."

Stratton continually hammered away on his contention that the United States would be acting in its own interest to admit 400,000 displaced persons.

He spoke not only of the enormous savings to American taxpayers but of the historic contribution of immigration.

"Throughout our history," he said, "immigration has produced not only new jobs but also new forms of industrial, agricultural, scientific and cultural development."

He told the committee that of the 850,000 displaced persons in Europe, 80 per cent are Roman Catholics and Protestants and 20 per cent are Jews.

Representative John M. Robison (R., Ky.), a committee member, interjected that immigration laws should be strengthened, not weakened.

"Mounting Abuse"

UNRRA's director general told his press conference he could "no longer keep silent in the face of the mounting abuse now being directed at UNRRA."

Naming Charles Poletti, former Governor of New York, former Wisconsin Senator Robt. M. Lafollette, Columnist Dorothy Thompson and David Martin as active in the Refugee Defense Committee Rooks said that some persons "would rather see displaced persons sit in camps until they rot thoroughly" than see further repatriation of Poles, Balts, Ukrainians and Yugoslavs.

He charged that these persons were dominated by political rather than humanitarian motives.

Rooks declared that although seven million persons have been repatriated since the end of the war, "no one substantiated incident of persecution after repatriation has come to my notice."

Needed in Native Lands

The UNRRA chieftain said he thought it was far better for those who can to return to their native lands.

He added that this country should do its part in accepting those who will not or cannot accept repatriation.

Rooks insisted that the displaced persons are needed in their native lands.

"There they are needed and wanted to help rebuild; there, by language and cultural background, they seem most likely to find conditions most conducive to their rehabilitation," he said.

Tax Increase Might Up Rent

and a $2,500,000 cut in next year's budget.

Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.) who took the lead in drafting the plan, will present it today to the House District Committee. Other committee members were prepared to strike at the real estate and gasoline tax boosts, and at the lack of a sales tax urged by the Commissioners.

Disagree on Sales Tax

Washington groups voiced sharp dissatisfaction with main portions of the program, but there was disagreement on the sales tax.

House District Appropriation Chairman Walt Horan (R., Wash.), said he'll make a fight for the sales tax before the District Committee on the House floor. He said the budget is more likely to be boosted six million dollars than cut.

Sharply protesting the real estate tax increase plan, Rufus S. Lusk, secretary of the Building Owners and Managers Association, said "we ought to have a sales tax."

The Board of trade said doubling liquor taxes would be preferable to a real estate tax boost. Otherwise, the group indorsed Bates' program.

Charles H. Hillegeist, president of the Real Estate Board, said a property boost would be unfair to homeowners and would encourage them to move outside the District.

Homeowners' opposition to a property tax boost was shared by Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) who also said he opposed any increase in gasoline tax.

McMillan, former chairman and now ranking Democrat of the House District Committee, said he felt residents are now paying about all the real estate taxes they can stand.

I'd favor an increase in the tax on business property, but not on residential, unless it can be proved to me these people can stand it," he declared.

Committee members generally favored an increase in Federal funds for the District, But Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.) said chances for getting an increase would be better if a sales tax, even at 1 per cent, were in the program.

Representative Karl Stefan (R., Nebr.) said the proposed Federal payment increase was "too previous" after the two-million-dollar boost granted last year. He said the income tax plan would mean "double taxation" for many individuals.

Packed Japan Grows Again Million a Year

This is the fifth of a series of articles on the occupation of Japan as it approaches the end of its second year.

By A. T. Steele

Copyright, 1947, New York Tribune Inc.

Tokyo, June 4.—Japan's No. 1 war criminal is overpopulation. War lords like Tojo might have been less successful in leading Japan into war and aggression had they not had behind them the pressure of a population expanding at the rate of one million annually. Although there was a recession in Japan's growth during the war, the rate of increment is now back again to its old figure of a million a year. Japan's fundamental problem is too many people for the land available.

Unless the Allied powers find a satisfactory answer to this dilemma, the chances for stability and democracy in Japan will, in the long run, be small.

There are three possible solutions. One is emigration. This can be ruled out since it is evident that very few countries will welcome Japanese immigration in the postwar era. The second is birth control. Here too the prospects are negligible. While the bans on birth control education have been lifted, both the occupation authorities and the Japanese government have so far declined to take a positive stand. Church opposition to birth control—especially from the Catholics—is very determined and is being constantly impressed on occupation officials.

This leaves industrial expansion and foreign trade as the only effective means through which Japan can provide a prosperous living for her people and pay for the food that must be imported to make up the 20 per cent deficit in her own agricultural production.

The extent to which Japan will be permitted to regain her old-time importance in international trade is a matter which will be largely up to the peace conference to decide. Some nations, fearful of the re-emergence of Japanese economic imperialism, will be interested in holding Japan down to rigid limits of economic expansion through restriction not only of basic industries but of peace-time light industries (such as textiles) as well. Another school would reduce production controls to the barest minimum compatible with Allied military security. It contends that a prosperous Japan is indispensable for the peace and stability of Asia, and that Japanese know-how and industrial capacity should be utilized to the utmost to help raise living standards in other Asiatic countries.

In any case it will take several years to put Japan even on a self-supporting basis. She will require extensive credits and substantial quanties of raw materials to build up her industry to the point where it can produce enough export goods to pay for her minimum import requirements. This burden will probably fall on the United States. There is talk of setting up a revolving fund for the purpose, although positive action is still remote. Estimates of the amount to be required range from 500 million dollars to $1,500,000,000. American occupation authorities here are inclined to recommend a liberal attitude toward Japan on economic matters, combined with firm checks and guaranties on the military side for a number of years. They are insistent, however, that such help should be conditional on a more energetic approach by the Japanese to their own economic problems instead of adopting the helpless attitude of a beggar nation.

It is obvious that until Japan reaches a point of self-subsistence, extensive trade controls will be needed. The Far Eastern Commission has authorized the fixing of reparations on a basis that would leave enough industrial capacity in Japan for this country to enjoy a standard of living similar to that of 1930-'34. This standard, while much better than the present one, was not very high. Even with extensive American help it is doubtful whether the level can be reached by 1950, which is the target date. Nor is the level a final or permanent one. Whether Japan is going to be able to elevate herself beyond that level depends on the kind of a peace imposed upon her.

It is evident that Japan's international trade will in the future be different in pattern from what it was in the past. The Japanese are being encouraged to build up their commerce along complementary rather than competitive lines with other Asiatic nations. If permitted, Japan will henceforth put more emphasis on such highly fabricated exports as machinery, machine tools, electrical equipment, railway rolling stock, bicycles and scientific instruments. She is the only Far Eastern country capable of producing such articles in large quantities and the need throughout Asia is enormous.

Cotton and rayon textiles and silk, which before the war dominated Japanese exports, will continue to be substantial items of trade, although it is doubtful whether they will ever attain their prewar importance. Today only two million cotton spindles are operated in Japan, compared with a prewar total of 13 million. As part of a plan for building up Japanese living standards to the 1930-'34 level, it has been estimated that cotton milling capacity should be raised to around six million spindles. For the same purposes, steel production might be leveled off at about 3,500,000 tons, or less than half the wartime peak. It is suggested that Japan be allowed to manufacture 375 locomotives annually in this interim period, of which about 250 would be sold to China or other countries that need them. China art objects and novelties will boost the export total, but not materially. A major source of foreign exchange in the future may be the tourist trade. An ambitious program is afoot to build resort hotels capable of accommodating the thousands of free-spending American sightseers who are expected to begin pouring into this country in 1949 or 1950.

Needs Raw Materials

In return for her exports, Japan hopes to receive such necessary raw materials as foodstuffs, raw cotton, salt, rubber and oil, mostly from the United States, China and the south Pacific.

But there are serious hitches in Japan's postwar trade plans. Shipping is one of them. She has only one million tons and needs three million. Is is problematical whether the Allies will allow the Japanese merchant fleet to exceed two million tons, or about half the prewar figure. Her internal rehabilitation problem is tremendous. Factory production stands today at only 30 per cent of normal. Japanese industrial equipment is largely worn out or outdated. Much of what is left after reparations have been taken will have to be replaced or repaired. Its rehabilitation to the extent necessary will not be possible without American credits or private investment by foreign capital. American capital is already beginning to show interest in investment opportunities here, although nothing can be done until controls are removed.

Japan's recovery is seriously impeded by delays in the drawing up of a peace treaty and international differences on reparations. Neither time nor place has been fixed for the peace conference on Japan, but the lines of controversy are beginning to take shape.

The reparations problem is far from final solution. The discrepancy between the American and Russian views might be widened if the Russians were to demand unduly heavy reparations from current Japanese production. Since the United States will probably help put Japan on her feet financially, she would not be likely to favor putting money into one end of the barrel and having it drained off at the other end in payment of foreign claims. Japan has already paid a terrific price for her mistake at Pearl Harbor. Heavy reparations from current production or a too severe curtailment of her industrial production might ruin her chances for recovery. It would be an ironic injustice, however, if Japan were allowed to become an economic menace to other Asiatic nations like China for whose present difficulties she bears such a heavy responsibility.

ONE IS A GOOD PLACE TO SEE FROM A DISTANCE—Much in the news a little more than a year ago, along with a can opener and a butter knife, is the edifice in the foreground. Formerly the residence of Joseph D. Medley and Earl McFarland, it is better known as the District Jail. It's large neighbor is the Armory, from which the fingerprint section of the FBI is now moving. It will revert to National Guard headquarters and will be available for recreational use, such as high school sports. The FBI unit will occupy Federal Office Building 1, used by the OPA during the war. Temporary buildings "X" and "Y" in the background, are in use by the Navy and Maritime Service, although the Navy is preparing to move out to Federal Office Building 2 in Arlington

Must Prove Socialization Workable

Tokyo, June 4.—Plans of the new Socialist-dominated Japanese government to place certain basic industries under state management will meet a cool reception at Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters unless the cabinet ministers are able to demonstrate a great increase in efficiency as a result.

Coal, iron and steel, fertilizer, electric power and shipbuilding have been suggested as likely industries to be taken over by the state.

One high occupation official today indicated he was not convinced state management was the right answer, on the basis of operations of the Japanese government to date. He said he was not ready to state this early whether Premier Tetsu Katayama's cabinet was likely to be an improvement over previous governments.

Ralph Davies Urges Senate Ratification of Oil Treaty

By The Associated Press

Ralph K. Davies, wartime deputy petroleum administrator, told the Senate Foreign Relation's Committee yesterday it would be "tragic and disheartening" if the Senate fails to ratify the Anglo-American oil treaty.

Oscar Chapman, Acting Secretary of the Interior, told the committee that, with production in the United States falling short of meeting demands, both he and Secretary Krug are supporting the principles and objectives of the treaty.

The agreement, Chapman said, would not extend Federal or international control over the oil industry nor interfere with States powers.

The treaty provides for mutual respect of oil concessions and equal opportunities for both British and American oil interests in drilling, refining and other operations. Davies said it is hoped eventually to get other oil producing nations of the world into the compact.

Davies said either government, if dissatisfied, could cancel the treaty after 90 days' notice and that if the United States later desires to keep out foreign oil, it can increase the tariff rate to do that. He added that a prohibitive tariff would be contrary to the principles expressed in the treaty.

He testified the concessions in the agreement principally favor the Americans and it is considered a step toward removal of British production and marketing restrictions against American companies operating abroad.

Chapman said unless domestic oil production increases sharply, the Nation must look within a few years to the Caribbean and the Persian Gulf.

"The constantly rising demand for oil, both here and abroad, may entail drastic shifts in sources of supply that may well have the most adverse effect upon American interests unless they are accomplished under orderly, stable and equitable conditions," Chapman said.

$80-a-Ton Housing Steel Sold for $180, Probers Are Informed

By The Associated Press

Levinson

Al Levinson, Cincinnati manufacturer, testified yesterday that he sold for $180 a ton a quantity of priority housing steel bought for approximately $80 a ton, because his bank ordered him to reduce his inventory.

Raymond Dickey, chief counsel for the Senate Small Business Subcommittee, before which Levinson appeared, interposed that 200 tons of the sheet steel eventually was sold to the Fort Wayne Pump Co., of Fort Wayne, Ind., for $225 a ton.

Levinson, president of the Steelcraft Manufacturing Co., told the committee he believes he complied with Government regulations when he disposed of about 862 tons of steel allocated to him to make prefabricated houses.

Dickey said: "The priority people don't agree with you."

Levinson acknowledged he did not confer with the housing expediter's office about selling the steel.

Levinson told the committee he bought the steel for about $80 a ton, the normal mill price, and he acknowledged that "on the surface" it appears that he made a profit of $86,000.

He said that for accounting purposes, however, the steel was treated as though it had been manufactured, overhead was charged against it, and that his firm made a book profit of only about 7½ per cent.

He submitted to the committee a purchase order for about 800 tons of the steel sold to the St. Louis Boiler & Equipment Co.

Form Not Signed

Dickey said that while the order was signed at the bottom, a stamped certification that the steel was to be used in the housing program was not signed.

Between January 1 and June 1, Levinson said, his firm has received 5672 tons of steel, about 80 per cent of it under priorities, and has sold 862 tons.

Joseph W. Gruber, who accompanied Levinson, said the firm last August advanced $7410 to R. A. Ascher of New York on a steel order and that it never received any. He said the firm has recovered about $750 of the deposit.

The subcommittee is investigating a steel "gray market" involving alleged sales of steel at excessive prices over mill values.

Suspect Arrested In Shooting of D. C. Policeman

Arrest in Baltimore of one of two men wanted in connection with the shooting early last Friday of Pvt. Francis Fenwick, Third Precinct policeman, was revealed last night by Washington police.

The suspect was identified by Baltimore police as Matthew McIntosh, 22, of Washington. Another suspect is still at large.

Fenwick was shot by two men he saw trying to loot a parked automobile. When he trapped the fugitives in a area way at 736 22d st. nw., one drew a gun and shot Fenwick three times.

The policeman, who lives at 838 20th st. ne., is now recovering at Emergency Hospital.

Cleaning Fluid Users Warned Of Fume Danger

Persons who use carbon tetrachlorides cleaning fluid were warned yesterday to avoid inhaling fumes and to use only small quantities in well-ventilated rooms.

Honor Slighted

No one with any feeling for Evans F. Carlson's shining place in our history can read the letter by Raymond Swing on his relatively unattended burial without a profound sense of chagrin. We associate ourselves fully with Mr. Swing's sentiments as expressed in our letter column. He does not mention an even more sobering fact—General Carlson's body had to be brought to Arlington Cemetery at the expense of his understudy and companion, James Roosevelt. The Government regulation prohibiting payment of transportation costs in such cases only emphasizes the shabby treatment accorded General Carlson. It is fruitless to attempt to ascribe reasons for the slight to one of America's great heroes, though The Post did print a story calling attention to the funeral services. There is, of course, no reflection on the Marine Corps which, as Mr. Swing points out, paid proper homage to one of its great officers. But the event called for more official recognition than it got. The only consolation lies in the sure knowledge that the imprint of General Carlson's valor and democratic faith is not something that can be eradicated.

Tax Talk

The Senate-House Economic Committee of which Senator Taft is chairman concludes that a survey of business opinion does not give any "real support" to the theory that the country is nearing a depression. Although a majority of those interrogated anticipate a mild recession this fall, they expect an increase in production, sales and manhour productivity in their own businesses.

It seems to us that these findings decidedly weaken the case for immediate tax reduction as a preventive of threatened depression. Both the Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee, of which Senator Taft is a member, have emphasized the importance of reducing taxes both as a means of stimulating investment and increasing consumer purchasing power. Yet our basic industries are booming and profits are at extraordinarily high levels, as are expenditures for expansion of plant and new equipment. Now come the business leaders to testify that they themselves are looking forward to a continuance of good times in their own particular fields.

Tax reduction under existing conditions is premature, to say the least. At the moment we are in the midst of a business boom; it may of course, be followed by deflation and depression. But our present difficulties are unmistakably inflationary in origin. Moreover, Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, testifying before the House Banking and Currency Committee, stated that 3.5 billion dollars had been added to the volume of consumer credit last year. The tax reduction bill would double that amount of purchasing power. At the same time he warned, many consumer goods have been priced out of the market, savings have been spent and large numbers of people are now living on consumer credit and mortgage credit. These inflationary tendencies are being further aggravated by foreign demands for our goods based on loans and credits.

Under such conditions the country certainly would not benefit from an inflationary injection of more purchasing power into circulation in the form of tax remissions. That would only increase the existing inflationary pressure on prices and work against a gradual orderly downward price adjustment that would afford permanent relief from overhigh living costs. Any stimulus to buying that might result from tax reduction would simply postpone downward adjustments that we believe to be inevitable, and make them all the more painful. As Mr. Eccles says, tax reduction should come later on and be used as "a brake on deflation rather than as an increased pressure on inflation."

The Republicans are eager to shoot their arrows at a lurking, invisible foe when the wise course would be to wait until the foe comes within striking range.

Derogatory Information

Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming has thoughtfully supplied the inescapable reduction to absurdity inherent in the Rees loyalty bill. Under the terms of this bill, he told the House Civil Service Committee on Tuesday, full-scale FBI investigations would have to be made of 42,000 persons on the Federal payroll, including detailed checks on their school records and their past employment. The plan, he says, would cost about 37 million dollars a year. This is not, to be sure, an exorbitant expenditure to purge the Government of foreign espionage agents. It is a whale of a lot of money, however, merely to find out that a number of Federal workers made the mistake of joining the American Youth Congress in their salad days or chose to buy phonograph records at cut rates through the Washington Bookshop.

Our guess is, anyway, that Mr. Flemming's estimate of 42,000 is conservative. This is the number concerning whom, he expects, "derogatory information will be found in Government files." We do not know, of course, precisely what constitutes derogatory information; but if the term is employed with anything like the elasticity given it by such Congressmen as Messrs. Rees and Rankin, the FBI would find itself obliged to abandon all other activities. For several times 42,000 Government employes, we venture, have at one time or another in their lurid pasts, committed the indiscretion of contributing money to Loyalist Spain, signing a petition for repeal of the poll tax, or disagreeing with some fellow-employe who chose to regard the disagreement as conclusive evidence of Communist sympathies.

There was a time, it will be remembered, when such conduct was considered an indisputable right of free citizens. Now, however, it is looked upon officially as evidence of subversive inclinations. And even those who long ago repented their rashness, withdrawing from associations which they had entered in all innocence, are liable to find a heritage of "derogatory information" in their dossiers. When the FBI at last finishes raking the records of these 42,000, or 420,000, hapless individuals, we doubt that it will develop enough evidence to persuade any board of reasonable men to convict more than a scanty handful of disloyalty to their country. The FBI could more usefully spend its time and the public's money on an independent search for actual alien agents.

The President's own plan for loyalty investigations, which Commissioner Flemming defended before the Civil Service Committee, would entail the expenditure of a mere 25 million dollars and the detailed investigation of some 32,000 to 35,000 employes—quite enough, we should think, to save the FBI from idleness. It would, however, keep the ultimate power to discharge Federal personnel where the Constitution says it belongs, in the responsible chiefs of the agencies where they are employed. And it would provide a system of review affording accused employes what Representative Vursell calls "too much protection." We wonder if there can be too much protection for the basic rights and the reputations of American citizens.

India In The Plural

The crazy quilt in which India may be left when Britain quits next June is hardly an augury that India under its own steam will be either peaceful or progressive. Fear of the future, indeed, seemed to be the underlying note in the speeches in India of the communal leaders when they informed their fellow-countrymen of the acceptance of Britain's detailed proposals for resigning British authority. There was something muted, almost flat, in the Indian welcome. Authority will be handed over to Moslem as well as Hindu after a vote has been taken in disputed areas as to communal allegiance. The announcement was the inevitable consequence of the refusal of the Moslems to cooperate with the Hindus in constitution-making. Accordingly India next June seems sure to be divided into Hindustan and Pakistan, perhaps two Pakistans, with the princely states in the position of independent kingdoms, if that is their wish. The Hindu hope, perhaps, is that division will prove so unworkable as to persuade even the Moslems to federate with the Hindus.

In great part this depends, of course, on the economics of Moslem territory. A thousand miles of Hindustan territory divide Pakistan—the distance, that is to say, between the Punjab in the northwest and eastern Bengal. The administrative difficulties involved by this separation of territory are bound to be immense. Nevertheless the experts seem to think that Pakistan is viable. Northwest Pakistan is rich in wheat, rice, wool, silk, sugar, livestock, and hides; eastern Pakistan also has more than enough food to be self-supporting, and, in addition, produces most of the world's jute. Possession of the jute would be a great bargaining point with the Moslems, as would the agricultural riches of northwest Pakistan. Assuredly they would make for a speeded-up industrialization. For instance, the jute mills would come to the jute, and with the mills the usual commercial facilities, such as banks. Pakistan would lose Calcutta to Hindustan, but there is a good port, and a potentially thriving one, at Chittagong, while Karachi would be the port for northwest Pakistan. Looking at this set-up, the experts feel that Pakistan could easily maintain the people's living standards after separation.

But this evaluation of the future of Pakistan is made in a political vacuum. It assumes the burying of the hatchet between Moslem and Hindu. In spite of political separation, the two communities would still be mingled together, and the danger of the spilling of bad blood would be perennial. This danger is implicit in the gravity of the communal leaders' speeches. It may probably make both the freed states think of the advisability of retaining a relation with the British Crown through Dominion status. This, anyway, will be accorded in the interim period beginning August till next June, when self-rule will be proclaimed. Pakistan seems certain to maintain the link, and it may be that Hindustan will do likewise.

At any rate, the British have fulfilled their pledges handsomely. In the light of what has happened of late in India they may now be acquitted in the eyes of our Anglophobes of "divide and conquer" administration in India. The division in India is fundamental—a division on religious grounds which is a reminder of the intolerance of the Europe of the religious wars. It was prevented from being expressed politically by the presence of the British Raj. Nothing seemingly could stop separation as soon as the British decided to pack up. At the same time the tensions had become so great in the last 20 years that maintenance of British authority would not have prevented civil commotion. On the contrary, it would have augmented trouble. The statesmanship that attended the union of the American or the German states is only a tithe of the statesmanship that is needed to cement an independent India. This country, we are sure, will watch its exercise with sympathy and prayerful anxiety, for a great deal is at stake for all of us in the liberation of the great and populous subcontinent of India.

Braden's Departure

The brusque exchange of notes which marks the exodus of Assistant Secretary of State Spruille Braden from the Government is hardly a gracious recognition of his valiant record as our diplomatic trouble shooter. Mr. Braden is most intimately associated with the so-called "get tough" policy toward Argentina. In reality what he did was to hold Argentina strictly to her international commitments. It is a policy that has paid off. As the Administration patches up—and the phrase is accurate—its disagreement with Argentina on the ground that the Peron government has reasonably fulfilled its Chapultepec pledges, actually it pays tribute to the effectiveness of Mr. Braden's work. The final grudging roundup of Nazi conspirators is the fruition of the unflinching stand taken by Braden when the going was rough.

Perhaps Mr. Braden's greatest virtue is that he does not believe in calling fascism by any other name. In this he is not what might be termed a diplomat's diplomat. He has a habit of calling the shots as he sees them. That was unquestionably what was needed when he went to Argentina as Ambassador in 1945. By this time Argentina had become a haven for Fascist activity in this hemisphere. Braden spoke his mind, and consequently incurred the wrath of the pro-Fascists in the Argentine government. Tremendous pressures developed for his recall both among the Peronistas and among the business-as-usual group in this country. It is to Braden's lasting credit that he refused to compromise with reality. By the time he returned to the United States as Assistant Secretary of State for Latin American Affairs, he had awakened the hemisphere to the bad neighborliness that was current in Argentina. Though the timing of the 1946 Blue Book on Nazi activities in Argentina may have been ill-advised, the contents amply justified Mr. Braden's firmness. We salute an American diplomat in the great tradition established by Benjamin Franklin.

Right To Work

In the search for some provision of the Taft-Hartley labor bill to which they can point for definite evidence of a reactionary spirit, opponents of the bill are inclined to single out the ban on the closed shop. But that is usually as far as they go. The President is urged to veto the bill because it would outlaw a device that some unions have long employed to make their power effective. Almost nothing is said, however, as to what the bill actually provides or of the additional safeguards it would throw around the right to work.

It is true that the closed shop, as it has been known in the past, would be outlawed as an instrument of inexcusable monopoly. More significant, however, is the fact that something better would be put in its place. Workers could have a union shop at any time simply by getting 30 per cent of their number to sign a petition requesting an election on the subject and then commanding a majority of the votes at the election. Certainly that involves no hardship. On the contrary, it gives the rank and file of working men a chance to make their own choice instead of having a union shop thrust upon them.

The union shop thus established would be confined to the legitimate purpose of maintaining the union's strength and dividing its expenses among all workers benefiting from its efforts. Unions would not have to carry the so-called "free riders," for the employer would have to fire men who failed to pay their dues. Unions would also be left free to expel their numbers for any other cause. But they could not, as they now sometimes do, deprive a man of his right to work because of mere dislike or disapproval of something he may have done. In other words, the only offense for which the union could force the discharge of an employe would be failure to pay his dues. Tight little labor monopolies would thus be broken and unions would no longer be in a position to dictate to the employer as to whom he could hire. This is nothing more than a belated triumph of common sense.

To take advantage of the union shop provision of the act, unions would also have to make an accounting for the spending of their funds and state their method of electing their officers. The union shop could operate successfully, moreover, only so long as the union avoided discrimination among employes and fixed reasonable initiation fees that would not amount to a tax on the right to work. Any sort of monopoly standing without regulation in the public interest is utterly incompatible with twentieth century democracy. As we see it, the substitution of a regulated union shop for the closed shop, as provided in the bill, would not detract one iota from the strength of unions in pursuit of their legitimate objectives. It would, of course, correct numerous abuses and take from a few ruthless labor bosses the power to deprive men of the right to work. But these are changes for which the great majority of citizens will be thankful.

Women in Armor

ONE SIGN that a complete end has come to the wait-and-weep role of women in war is the widespread interest in having them made a permanent part of the Army and Navy.

Wacs have so far escaped the economy ax of Congress. As yet, no oratorical rumblings about their being "a reflection on the country's manhood" have been revived. The Army is eager to have its women's corps continued. Women's national groups are urging congressional action on a bill providing that Wacs constitute 2 per cent of total Army strength. Legislation to make Waves a permanent part of the Navy will soon be sought.

All of this comes at a time when post-mortems are being held on American women's contribution—or lack of contribution—to the last war. Capt. Mildred McAfee Horton, who headed the Waves during the war, told 600 women at a recent luncheon that she feared American women had been overpraised for their war services. She paid tribute to what they did, but asked why such service should be regarded as remarkable in view of the sacrifice asked of men.

WOMEN LEADERS are realistically facing the fact that women did not volunteer for the armed forces to the extent they were needed (owing chiefly, it was believed, to objection of their men), and that they got no such battle testing as did women of other warring countries. Many of them had the unique experience of being probably the last of their sex in history able to wear pretty clothes and give parties as usual while their country was engaged in a major war.

Hence the question: Will American women be able to take it—or do anything about it—if national disaster comes to their doorsteps?

Many believe that a permanent Women's Army Corps would help drive home to American women that they will have to be partners of men in all future defense—also in foreign occupation duties and in keeping world order. It would also provide a sizable number of trained women—21,000 would be 2 per cent of scheduled Army strength—for service in national emergency. For the Army, like many other employers, has found that women can do certain things better than men, that both in war and peace it needs their special skills.

Most important, a continued call of women to the colors would help combat the "gimme" menace in American life. Women are turning more and more from careers that involve service to those that offer easy money, glamour, excitement. Not all of the teacher and nurse shortages can be blamed on society's ignoble neglect of these professions. Some of it goes back to the service ideal's having become unfashionable.

THIS WANING ideal was revived in the enlistment of many Wacs and Waves. The extent to which it still prevails is shown in a recent report on the 2200 Wacs in the European theater by Genevieve Forbes Herrick, member of the National Civilian Advisory Committee for the Women's Army Corps.

Mrs. Herrick repeatedly found capable and enthusiastic Wacs who had given up promising careers because they felt it a duty to enlist. She quoted such sentiments as: "There was a job to be done and somebody had to do it" . . . "I'm single and I had no one" . . . "No member of my family was able to be in the war, and I wanted to make a contribution."

She found overseas commanders crying, "We want Wacs." This was because of Wacs' attitudes as well as skills. Being volunteers and generally older than GIs (their average age in Europe is 30 years) they were seldom victims of the "wanna go home" fever.

Mrs. Herrick's report tells how Wac service helped many girls discover and develop their talents. A permanent corps would offer many American girls a chance at career training, as well as a living, and opportunity to pay for the privileges their country gives them.

Evans F. Carlson

May I call attention to the strange absence of public participation in the burial of Brig. Gen. Evans Carlson at Arlington National Cemetery? For this the public was not to blame. No notice of the funeral was given, and most of the friends who appeared at the Fort Myer Chapel—only enough to fill a dozen pews—were notified by the family. The Marine Corps furnished a guard of honor; the Marine Band played; cannon fired a salute due to a brigadier general; General Vandegrift was present; the funeral service by a Marine captain left nothing to be desired in piety and correctness. But one had no sense that a grateful Nation was lovingly saying farewell to one of its rarest heroes and one of the most sincere practicing democrats of his generation.

It was perhaps understandable that as an iconoclast in matters of military discipline Evans Carlson should have been quietly pushed upstairs at the height of his success as leader of his Raiders, but it would be unpardonable if this policy should have been responsible for what must count as a relatively obscure burial. It would have been not only generous to have accorded Evans Carlson a hero's farewell; it would have given the people whom he loved and trusted a chance to express their gratitude for his ideals and service.

I venture to estimate that a generation from now Evans Carlson will be one of the best known and best loved Americans of the war, not only for his intrepid skill and courage but because he redeemed so much that was lacking in democratic faith among some of his contemporaries.

But one had no sense of this at today's service and may ask the Marine Corps and the Navy Department and indeed the Government of the United States whether they know well enough how to value the great men who have served them. One may be sure that privates in all the services are not wanting in that respect.

Scurrilous Attack

Please accept my apologies as a European for the scurrilous twaddle another European—whose source of civilization is unquestionably gallant—has picked off some bombed gutter. (See letter, "Irish Ire," by J. J. Walsh, published June 1.) My experience runs contrary to Mr. Walsh's hearsay. My family and I have gone through more than six years of harrowing tortures that no latter day promenader in Fenway Park dares imagine.

Our search for liberty in destroying the shackles of despotism of any description found, in Americans broadly described and in Americans of the United States in particular, a nobility of purpose, braveness undaunted and self-denial unparalleled in the history we have somehow gone through. American generosity and fairplay met too often with perfidious dealings among those whom America strived to free from undue coercion. But perhaps Mr. Walsh lacks the knowledge or the . . . "understrapping virtue of discretion," as one of his witty authors puts it. It cannot be otherwise.

Food Prices

Any housewife who buys the week's groceries for a growing family and who also bought groceries in wartime (as I do and did) and who bothers to know what those groceries cost, must be very sorry that we have done away with OPA. Just think of the difference in cost of milk, oleo, cheese, soap and bread, to mention only a few items. I am suspicious that the women who call themselves "Another Housewife" and "Housewife" (letters published May 30 and 22, respectively), are good examples of people who live that they may eat, rather than the great bulk of our housewives who eat that they and their children may live. Perhaps that is why they do not sign their names to their letters.

"Abide With Me"

I am writing the story of the beloved hymn "Abide With Me" to mark its centenary which falls on September 5, followed on November 20 by the centenary of the author's death. I should be grateful if readers would send me by air mail any experiences linked with this hymn. As the secretary of the Henry Francis Lyte commemorations I am planning to have this hymn sung on November 16 in every Christian place of worship throughout the world. Eventide homes will be erected on the shores of Torbay near the Devonshire fishing town of Brixham where the hymn writer ministered and wrote his famous hymns.

Truman on Art

In The Post of June 2, Drew Pearson reports a letter written by the President to Assistant Secretary of State William Benton concerning the State Department's policy on art. To any observer, it must seem more than ridiculous to find the highest officials in our Government, the President, the Secretary of State, and on down the line, making statements and expressing opinions about something they admittedly "don't know anything about."

For years, a well recognized source of humor has been the situation wherein a gallery visitor spouts, "I don't know anything about art, but . . . " Either our esteemed public officials have no sense of humor, or so much of one that they do not mind being the butt of a laughable situation.

Before accusing contemporary artists of laziness, and condemning their works as "vaporings," I would suggest that our officials recall some of the incidents of Rembrandt's career. Many of the pictures he was commissioned to paint for civic organizations were rejected or not paid for because they were "too dark." It was complained that one could not recognize the various members of the citizenry.

Surely the President and his Cabinet members have enough to occupy them in fields in which they do know something. As W. S. Gilbert put it,

"Noble statesmen do not itch to interfere in matters which they do not understand."

Housing Picture

Mr. O. J. Dekom has written several letters to The Post relating to the housing situation and the plight of landlords under rent control. Mr. Dekom expresses a desire to deal with facts rather than "personal attacks and high-sounding phrases."

The Washington Industrial Union Council, CIO, is happy to acquaint Mr. Dekom with the following facts:

1. Mr. Dekom asserts there is no housing shortage, rather that there is an "overconsumption of available space."

Facts: In February, 1946, the Census reported there were 3,125,000 secondary families in the United States living in the households of 2,925,000 primary families. More than one third of the secondary families had a World War II veteran as the head, and an additional one tenth had the wife of a member of the armed forces as the head.

2. Mr. Dekom states "that the 1939-1946 comparisons of operating income for rental property owners cited by Mr. Benjamin C. Sigal of Americans for Democratic Action was made by an OPA official without any basis of fact."

Facts: The data referred to show that for the year ending June 30, 1946, net operating income for apartment house owners was 28 per cent higher than in 1939. For small structures net operating income was 43 per cent higher than in 1939. The source of these data was income and expense records of a sample of tenant-occupied buildings secured by OPA accountants through real estate boards, bank and trust companies, property management organizations and individual property owners.

Regarding the reliability of the data, in the New York City protest before the Emergency Court of Appeals, the metropolitan fair rent committee, the complainants accepted the OPA survey data as representative of the general operating position of landlords in their city. It should be noted that in the figures cited above net operating income for small structures (less than five families) was 43 per cent higher in 1946 than in 1939. According to the Bureau of the Census, between 88 and 90 per cent of the rental units in the United States are in small structures.

In the case of apartment houses, the OPA has not published data showing net income, i.e., deductions for interest and depreciation. However, on the basis of studies in seven cities where OPA accountants were successful in obtaining interest and depreciation data for a sizable sample of apartment house properties, it is estimated that net income (after deductions for interest and depreciation) will increase by at least three times the percentage increase in net operating income.

Thus if interest and depreciation data were available for all apartment house properties surveyed by OPA, their 1946 net income would probably be at least 84 per cent higher than in 1939. In cities actually surveyed by OPA, net income for apartment houses ranged from 88 per cent to more than 200 per cent higher in 1945 than in 1939. Net income has increased much more rapidly than net operating income because depreciation charges have remained stable and net interest charges have declined, due to amortization of mortgages and refinancing at lower rates of interest.

3. Mr. Dekom, while agreeing with Mr. Sigal that the average rent level in Washington is higher than in other cities, seeks to justify this on the grounds that "housing accommodations are generally better than in other urban areas."

Facts: According to the United States Bureau of the Census in 1940, Washington ranked twelfth out of a total of 23 cities in the United States with a population of 100,000 or more in the matter of what is commonly accepted basic housing necessity—access to a private bath or shower. In Washington, in 1940, one out of every eight occupied dwelling units were lacking a private bath or shower.

GERTRUDE M. EVANS,
Executive Secretary, Washington Industrial Union Council.

High Cost of Labor

Mr. Chat Patterson, lobbyist for the American Veterans Committee, recently wrote you a letter condemning someone else for inconsistency regarding his treatment of the housing situation. Mr. Patterson is in a bad spot to accuse anyone else of being inconsistent. The organization he belongs to has upheld everything that labor has done, good or bad. At the same time the AVC has been agitating for low-priced housing for houseless veterans.

The chief reason that there is no low cost housing available for veterans is the exorbitant wages that housing union laborers are demanding. You can't build a low-cost home with bricklayers, lathers and painters getting the wages they do, especially when they do the kind of work they put out on the average home today.

British Gratitude

May I be permitted to occupy a small space to express the gratitude I feel toward America in return for her boundless hospitality, goodwill, and general courtesy shown to me on this my first visit to your country.

It is my belief that if more individual Britishers would visit the United States and discover for themselves the generous, unaffected attitude of friendliness offered us by American citizens, the bond of friendship and respect between the two nations would be very considerably strengthened.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Plea For Prudence

The situation in Italy and in central Europe has taken a decided turn for the worst just as the Senate is dealing with ratification of the satellite treaties. Yet it seems to me that what has happened is, if we examine it, a reason, though it runs counter to our feelings, for prompt ratification (which is what Secretary Marshall Lippmann and Senator Vandenberg want) rather than for delay.

THE NEW situation is marked by two connected events—one of them in Budapest and one in Rome. In Hungary and in Italy there have been until recently and indeed since the armistice coalition governments. Now there is in Hungary a government which the Communists dominate. In Italy there is now a government in which the Communists and Socialists are not included, against which they are in open opposition and perhaps in actual rebellion.

What makes the situation so dangerously difficult is that the Communist-Socialist opposition to the present Italian government draws its main strength from the industrial areas of northern Italy, which are separated only by an imaginary line from Yugoslavia and Hungary. The stage is, therefore, set, the lines of communication have been opened, for Soviet support of an Italian revolutionary opposition to the de Gasperi government in Rome.

Moreover the political restraint upon the Italian opposition has been reduced, if not removed entirely, by the fact that the de Gasperi government does not represent the legally elected majority in the legislature.

IT FOLLOWS that the frontier between Italy and the Soviet orbit has now become more important than it was when Mr. Byrnes was negotiating the Italian treaty. The basic issue is, however, no longer what it was, that is to say where the frontier should be drawn, and who should have Trieste and Istria. The question now is whether any international frontier can be established and maintained which will separate the revolutionary opposition in northern Italy from its allies in Yugoslavia, Hungary, and the Soviet Union.

The ratification of the treaty will establish an international frontier which is legally binding upon all the United Nations. The violations of that frontier would then be a question for the United Nations. If, however, the treaty is not ratified, the dividing line will be merely the present armistice line which is held by British and American troops. For this reason it seems to me that we have the greatest interest in a prompt ratification of the Italian treaty, and of the others which are grouped with it. For this will broaden the responsibility for the maintenance of law and order to include all the United Nations. Delay, on the other hand, which in present conditions may be tantamount to rejecting the treaty, would put upon us, with such help as the British could give, the sole responsibility for maintaining the territorial integrity, and maybe even the independence, of Italy.

THAT WOULD, I believe, multiply the risks and greatly increase the burden which we have assumed. No doubt we shall have to supply the economic support for Italian relief and recovery. But what we must seek to avoid is finding ourselves in a position where an Italian government, opposed by great masses of Italians, is sponsored and supported by the United States alone.

That would be ruinous to the Italian government, since it would be pictured as a minority government and a puppet of the United States. The State Department has already laid itself open to that line of attack, which the Soviets will surely pursue, by its effusive and clumsily timed indorsement of the new de Gasperi government.

EUROPE CANNOT be saved from Soviet domination or from economic collapse and anarchy by a series of unilateral American interventions. The supreme problem which confronts Secretary Marshall is to extricate the United States from the consequences and the commitments of a spasmodic unilateralism and to get it replaced by a European policy—which we can promote, induce, and support but cannot initiate and impose—of reconstruction and unification and stabilization.

We are in grave danger not of withdrawing into isolation as in 1919 but of advancing into isolated interventions all over the globe. We are not strong enough or wise enough to do that successfully, and we shall squander our influence, our power, and our resources if we attempt it.

Thus we should not have a United States-Italian policy, as we now seem to have, but only an Allied policy in which Great Britain and France, at the minimum, have an equal moral and political responsibility. For to have an American-Italian policy is not a true policy of international cooperation but in the literal and worst meaning of the word an "entangling alliance."

WE ARE TOO far out front in too many places. We are taking on ourselves too many problems. We are making too many quick decisions. We are accepting too many moral commitments. We are striking too many attitudes.

For our own good and for the sake of peace most of these things should be shared in the process of decision, shared as to political responsibility, with other governments. For otherwise we may find that Uncle Sam is the head of the parade and that everybody is out of step but uncle.

Rest Cure In Czechoslovakia

SOCIAL NOTES from all over: Andrei Y. Vishinsky, Deputy Foreign Minister of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, has gone to Carlsbad in Czechoslovakia for a rest cure at that famous spa.

Childs

This is a social note which the foreign offices of every capital are studying with great diligence. Mr. Vishinsky is not the kind of man who goes traveling for pleasure not even for his health.

He is, in fact, one of the most able, brilliant and ruthless operators in the inner circle of the Kremlin. He paid a little visit to Romania in 1945 and immediately there was a change in the government. Gen. Nicolai Radescu was replaced as Prime Minister by the wholly subservient Peter Groza. Vishinsky is said to have delivered an ultimatum to young King Michael to kick out Radescu or else. Radescu finally succeeded in escaping from the country. Groza is still puppet Premier.

WHILE VISHINSKY'S visit to Czechoslovakia may be wholly innocent of political motive, it is bound to be linked to what has just happened in Hungary. Czechoslovakia is a key piece on the Soviet chessboard.

Ringing down the iron curtain on Hungary was comparatively easy. That country was occupied by Soviet troops. Force could be used to drive the non-Communists out of the government even though they represented a majority of the voters. It was another demonstration of the strong-arm technique in its cruder form.

BUT THE same method would not work in Czechoslovakia. To begin with, Russian troops long since evacuated that country. The government is not dependent on a Russian prop.

Of the 26 cabinet members in the present government in Prague, nine are Communists who have key positions. A Communist, Klement Gottwald, is Premier. Communists hold the posts of Interior, Information, Labor and Social Welfare, and Finance among others. A Communist is in reality the power in the Foreign Office, although the post of Foreign Minister is held by a non-Communist, Jan Masaryk, son of Czechslovakia's founder.

At the last election, the Communist Party got the largest percentage of votes—38 per cent. All indications, however, are that this tide has receded. It is believed that another election might show quite a different result.

The Russians would find it embarrassing to have a country so close to the Soviet orbit turn against communism. They could be counted on to do everything in their power to prevent it. Consequently the extreme interest in Vishinsky's pilgrimage to the healing waters of Carlsbad.

With brains and and money in sufficient quantity, a Communist coup in Czechoslovakia could be organized. There, of course, it would be essential to use the native Communist Party in the Trojan horse as contrasted to the strong-arm technique.

STEP NO. 1—Discovery of a wicked Fascist plot conveniently focused in the Slovakian Democratic Party, which is anti-Communist. Step No. 2—Declaration by the Premier of a state of emergency. Step No. 3—Communists replacing non-Communists in important posts not already held, and continuation of the government in power by force of police and soldiery in a virtual dictatorship.

That would not be easy to engineer. The Czechoslovakis are a valiant and a proud people. They fiercely resisted the Nazi oppression even after their betrayal.

The stakes, however, are high. If the Politbureau in the Kremlin has decided that this is the next move in the contest with the West, then Vishinsky can be counted on to move heaven and earth to bring it about.

It is significant that the hotels and the baths at Carlsbad, once frequented by the rich to cure their gout, are reserved for high-ranking Russians. To Carlsbad nowadays come Soviet military men who because of their valor or their injuries—often both—are granted this privilege. Carlsbad is not far from Joachimsthal, where mining of extensive uranium deposits is said to be going forward under Russian direction.

What happened in Hungary is bound to make a deep impression in western Europe. Censorship and propaganda cannot conceal the brutality of the method used to destroy a duly elected government. The West will certainly watch with bated breath the course of developments in neighboring Czechoslovakia. And the Czechs can hope and pray that Mr. Vishinsky will go quietly back to Moscow after a successful rest cure.

Solution In India

By Barnet Nover

Independence And Partition

AUGUST 15, 1947, the second anniversary of the surrender of Japan will mark the beginning of one of the most momentous political experiments in all history—an experiment involving the fate of a fifth of the human race.

NOVER

On that day, the destinies of the sub-continent that is India, with its 400 million people of many races, religions, castes and conditions of life, will pass wholly into Indian hands. By then—10 months ahead of schedule — Great Britain will have completed her withdrawal from that country, ending a rule that has lasted more than two centuries.

HOWEVER, the end of British rule in India may not mean the end of the historic association between Great Britain and India.

Until June 30, 1948, India or the Indias—it may be partitioned into two nations, Hindustan and Pakistan—will belong to the British Commonwealth of Nations.

This relationship may prove tenuous and temporary since, after June 30, 1948, the government of India or, more specifically, the governments of Hindustan and Pakistan, may decide to withdraw from the Commonwealth.

It is tremendously significant, however, that the decision to assume membership in that international federation of free and independent nations was not imposed by Great Britain but was voluntarily accepted by the Indians themselves. Indeed, many of the Indian leaders probably saw in this Commonwealth membership the only way in which that unity of India which now threatens to be broken can be preserved in fact if not in form.

THE PLAN of independence which Lord Mountbatten, the British viceroy, succeeded in working out with the leaders of the Moslem Party, the Indian National Congress and the Sikhs pleases nobody altogether.

One of the great objections the Congress Party had to the abortive Cripps plan of 1942 was that it threatened the unity of India. Provinces or groups of provinces were, under that plan, to have the right to decide whether to join the Indian federation or go their own way.

This, essentially is what Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and the Congress Party leaders have now agreed to. The choice, as they saw it, was between partition and chaos. They chose what they deem the lesser of two evils.

For M. A. Jinnah and the Moslem League, too, the plan now agreed upon falls far short of meeting their wishes concerning Pakistan.

Pakistan, as Jinnah envisaged it, would have included all of the Punjab, Bengal, Assam, Sind, Baluchistan and the Northwest Frontier Province.

The plan as agreed upon makes possible a partition of the Punjab and Bengal so as to exclude from Pakistan those parts of those rich provinces which are not Mohammedan. The Sikh area of the Punjab, for instance, is certain to vote to join Hindustan.

EVEN in its originally conceived form, it is questionable whether Pakistan had the possibility of becoming a viable state. The eastern and western portions are separated by a great Hindustani corridor of over a thousand miles. Moreover, in contrast to Hindustan, it lacks industrial resources. Whether the 60 million inhabitants of Pakistan could maintain themselves if cut off from the rest of India is open to question.

There is no question that Jinnah is fanatically determined to set up an independent Moslem state.

It remains to be seen whether the Moslems, once they had achieved their independence, can make their state work.

In his broadcast to the Indian people, Nehru while announcing his acceptance of the compromise plan "with a heavy heart," at the same time expressed the hopeful belief that "in this way we shall reach a united India sooner than otherwise."

He may be right. The Balkanization of India can do nobody in India very much good. The one supreme accomplishment of the British in India was to unite India, a nation never previously united.

This process of unification is now to be reversed. But by that very token both of the two great communities in India, the Hindus and the Moslems, may feel it necessary to retain that link which, binding them to Great Britain and the other members of the British Commonwealth, will also bind the severed parts of India.

Early Ruling Promised in S. C. On Negro Vote in Primary

Columbia, S. C., June 4 (AP).—District Judge J. Waites Waring heard concluding arguments this afternoon in a two-day Federal Court suit seeking to open the South Carolina Democratic primaries to Negroes and promised an early decision.

He gave attorneys 10 days in which to file additional briefs.

The suit was brought by George Elmore, Columbia Negro, who contended he was denied the right to vote in Democratic Primaries and asserted that the Party was a "governmental function' 'even though unrecognized by law.

The South Carolina legislature repealed its primary laws following a 1944 U. S. Supreme Court decision that Negroes could vote in Democratic primaries in Texas. Since then the primaries in this State have been conducted by the Party itself as club affairs and limited to whites.

Attorneys for the Richland County (Columbia) Democratic Executive Committee, defendant, said the party was a private association with the right to limit its membership.

Thurgood Marshall, attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told the judge today "the State of South Carolina made the primary election an integral part of the election machinery of the State" by enactment in 1915 of comprehensive election laws. Although these laws were repealed three years ago, he contended, "The primary goes on."

"The people who are governing the State of South Carolina are the same people who are running the Democratic Party in the State," he said. "They have a vested interest in this primary" from which Negroes are excluded by party rules.

He said that the defense's argument that Elmore "can in conjunction with other people organize a party and defeat Democratic candidates in the general election" was "not valid."

U. S. Asks U. N. Speed World Police Force

Lake Success, N. Y., June 4 (U.P.).—The United States asked the United Nations Security Council today to speed establishment of an international police force that could smash an aggressor the instant peace was threatened.

American Delegate Herschel Johnson complained that preliminary discussion of the problem were "disappointing," and hinted that Russia was to blame.

Johnson was the first speaker as the Security Council opened debate on the basic principles underlying the proposed international force. Big Five representatives, in more than a year of private discussions, agreed on 25 basic principles, but disagreed on 16 others.

Johnson asked the Security Council to try to reconcile these differences by early September. This, he said, would be the first big step toward creation of a "mobile force able to strike quickly and bring to bear upon any point in the world the maximum armed force in the minimum time."

Wants Public Debate

Johnson said all further debate should be conducted in public so that the people of the world would understand the issues involved. He noted that on each point under dispute the United States sided with the majority. The American argument is that Russian objections to certain principles are intended to weaken the force.

The force is intended to be only large enough to thwart aggression by a smaller power. It would not be large enough to war against any of the Big Five.

This brought a protest today from Fernand van Langenhove of Belgium, who said U.N. also should consider how to stop a major power.

Van Langenhove said Russia was seeking "Utopia" when it proposed that each of the Big Five nations make identical contributions to the international force.

The United States and other big powers want the Big Five to make "comparable" contributions. They argue that countries with the latest types of aircraft and warships should make them available instead of being limited to something that the weakest nation could give.

Russia also disagrees with the majority on who should command the international forces in action, where they should be based, and where they should return after they complete a mission.

Johnson, slapping at the Russian stand, cautioned against "artificial restrictions."

Truman Asks Speed to Keep War Powers

President Truman asked congressional leaders of both parties yesterday to speed action on his requests for extension of certain war powers due to expire June 30.

Mr. Truman called on them to hurry enactment of bills, now pending, to:

1. Extend the Maritime Commission's authority to charter oil tankers. Speaker Martin said the President asked this especially to avoid a possible oil shortage in Eastern States this winter. The commission now operates more than 200 tankers.

2. Extend for one year the Export-Control Act. This would apply to certain articles still in short supply. Extension legislaton has been approved by the House Armed Services Committee and also is before the Senate Judiciary Commttee.

3. Extend certain allocation and priority controls under the Second War Powers Act. This applies to foods, fertilizers and other scarce commodities. Bills are before the Judiciary Committees of both houses. The House Committee has scheduled hearings for Friday and the Senate group next Wednesday.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross said there was "no particular controvery" over the extension of war powers. He said the chef concern was time, because of the approaching expiration date.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, Democratic floor leader, said no specific date had been mentioned in connection with extending priority controls, but it is thought advisable to set a date, probably around February 1, 1948, to give the next session of Congress convening in January time to consider any emergency existing then.

4 Men Take Own Lives

Moffett Wills

Lee Moffett and George Moffett, both of Washington; a daughter, Mrs. Mildred E. Vandergrift of Baltimore, and six grandchildren.

Killerlain, a graduate of Calvin Coolidge High School, was found in the basement of his home by his mother, Mrs. Myron Oliver Killerlain, who had just returned from her work at the Government Printing Office about 6 a. m.

A downtown drug store clerk, he had served 2½ years in the Navy, a part of the time in the Southwest Pacific. He was discharged 13 months ago. Police quoted his mother as saying he had been despondent over failure to become an apprentice printer. The youth was born in Waterloo, Iowa, and lived in Takoma Park, Md., 10 years before moving to Silver Spring about a year ago. In addition to his mother, he is survived by two brothers, Walter, 23, and George, 19, both of the Silver Spring address.

Collier's body was found by his wife, Laurette, about 6 p. m. yesterday as she returned from work as a secretary with the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission in Hyattsville.

He had not gone to work yesterday because he was feeling ill, she said.

Collier was a native of Nashville, Tenn., and had lived in Silver Spring since 1932 when they moved there from Takoma Park. They have a son, Pfc. James G. Collier, II, stationed at Parris Island, S. C., with the Marines.

Dr. Garsson Testifies May Never Got Him One Contract

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Dr. Henry M. Garsson yesterday said he went to former Congressman A. J. May for help against Army red tape and stupidity.

The chubby, balding Garsson and his brother, Murray, are on trial with May for bribery and conspiracy. Prosecutor William A. Paisley claims the Garssons bought May's influence for $50,000 when he was House Military chairman and they were getting 78 million dollars worth of war business.

Dr. Garsson told the court May never got him a single contract. He said he got them for himself, and found the raw material to fill them and whipped the problem of production in his weapon shops. But, he said, the brass hat mind was too much for him.

When he worked out a way to make shell fuses fast—by working on soft steel and hardening the finished fuse—Dr. Garsson said the Army would not let him buy the machines to do it with. "Because," the officers told him, "it can't be done. It's impossible."

Finally Got Machines

Dr. Garsson said at last he got the machines and made 1,900,000 fuses.

For years the 4.2 inch mortar shell was turned out of steel forgings—a slow and costly process. Dr. Garsson asserted he worked out a way to make these shells out of steel pipe. Again, he said, he was told, "it can't be done,' but he made 2,800,000 of them just the same.

These things made Army officers in the Chicago area mad at him, Dr. Garsson said, and besides that they discriminated against his companies because he and his colleagues were Jews. So he was not allowed to bid on contracts, he said, and went to May for help, but had rough going for years. Only when every other weaponmaker in Chicago turned down the 8-inch shell was he offered a contract, he said. He gave the names of three officials he claimed told him the local Army bosses did not like him and did not want to give him an order, but found that in this case they had to.

Dr. Garsson said one time he got an order to outfit some chemical trucks, on a bid of $900 apiece. When all the fittings were cut and there was about $10 more work to do on each truck he was told to call off the job, junk the fittings and put in a claim for what he had spent. The reason given, he said, was that the trucks were not available.

Dr. Garsson said he tried in vain to make the Army believe he had the trucks—which belonged to the Army—right in his plant, filling up 5 or 10 acres of parking space. He said that was one of the times he went to May for help, and showed him the trucks, but even with the Congressman to back him up he couldn't convince the Army its trucks were in his plant.

Dr. Garsson said he gave the Government his 4.2 inch shell process free and that it saved the Army 200 million dollars during the war.

Both an M-66 fuse and a 4.2 shell were in court yesterday and after Justice Henry A. Schweinhaut left the bench Dr. Garsson showed how they worked. As his brother gestured and explained, Murray Garsson patted the shell fondly and said proudly: "That's the baby that won the war!"

2 Policemen Held In Rape of Girl

Oakland, Calif., June 4 (U.P.).—Two policemen were held today on suspicion of raping a 16-year-old high school girl they caught petting with a boy friend in lovers' lane.

Investigating officers said Patrolman Robert George Bell, 27, confessed that he and his patrol car partner, Edward E. Bauer, 31, forced the girl to submit by threatening to report her intimacy with her boy friend to juvenile authorities and to her mother. The two policemen were arrested yesterday afternoon after the boy and girl picked them out of a police lineup.

Brewster Brands U. S. Policy On Foreign Aviation a 'Crime'

By The Associated Press

Senator Brewster (R., Me.) said yesterday that United States foreign aviation policy is a "crime."

Brewster, sponsor of a bill to merge all United States overseas airlines into one company, said a "tragic illustration of that policy" is a Peruvian company's proposal to fly to Canada by way of Cuba and the United States.

"They will take that rich traffic, the cream of the run between Montreal and New York and New York and Havanna," Brewster told a State Department witness who testified before a Senate Subcommitte considering the bill.

The witness, Assistant Secretary of State Garrison Norton, opposed Brewster's measure because it would be "viewed, rightly or wrongly, as evidence of aroused Government activity in this field, and probably as evidence of imperialistic activity.

Brewster told Norton Peru is "an outstanding example of the crime of the policy you are pursuing."

He mentioned the Peruvian International Airline, which is headed by Gen. Harold L. George, former commanding general of the Army Air Transport Command, and said:

"I think Gen. George has demonstrated that he can run a global airline. Then you and Mr. Landis (chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board) come in here and tell us foreign countries cannot compete with us in international air transport."

Argentina Orders 100 British Jet Fighters

London, June 4 (AP).—An informed diplomatic source said today Argentina had contracted with the Gloster plant for 100 jet-propelled Gloster Meteor fighters for her military air force.

Handicapped Pilots Passed, Doctors Hear

Atlantic City, N. J., June 4 (AP).—Charges that the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington has been granting flight certificates to pilots whom medical examiners found physically deficient were made to the Aero Medical Association today, but these handicapped pilots, the report stated, apparently have had no more accidents than men sound in health and limb.

Actually the below-par men had slightly fewer accidents, but the differences were not considered significant.

Dr. H. R. Bohlman of Baltimore said "laymen are passing judgment on medical problems, and against sound medical advice are granting certificates to fly."

The medical examinations are made by physicians of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and then go to the board for final action.

Dr. Dean P. Brimhall of Civil Aeronautics, said from time to time pilots are certified by the board when the medical division has been opposed.

He said that 27 per cent of the men passed by the board over medical opposition had respiratory deficiencies. These included 12 asthmatics and 3 tubercular persons.

There were 13 per cent ear deficiencies. Four candidates had digestive troubles, three being ulcers. Ten per cent had visual deficiencies and 10 per cent leg amputations.

Georgetown Student Charges Policeman Assaulted Him

Daniel Joseph Fitzpatrick, 22, war veteran student at Georgetown University, charged last night that a District policeman blackjacked him in an unprovoked assault yesterday morning.

The patrolman, Pvt. James A. Stewart of the Seventh Precinct, however, said the student's head injuries came when he slipped while resisting arrest for disorderly conduct.

Lieut. Paul Barnes, acting police captain of the precinct, said he was making a complete investigation and would take any action warranted. In the meantime, Private Stewart remains on duty and Student Fitzpatrick is free after posting $5 bond on the disorderly conduct charge. He sports a head bandage over "five or seven stitches."

Arrested as Drunk

Lieutenant Barnes declared that Private Stewart told him he arrested Fitzpatrick last Thursday at 36th and M sts. nw. on a drunk and disorderly charge. The student, Lieutenant Barnes said, forfeited $15 collateral on those charges.

At 5:45 a. m., yesterday, according to Private Stewart's version, the two met in front of the Little Tavern, Wisconsin and M sts. nw., where Fitzpatrick "cursed" the policeman and "threatened to get even." Stewart was off-duty yesterday.

Fitzpatrick says he had taken two examinations at the university Tuesday night and talked them over with friends before going to the tavern for some coffee. He was waiting for a streetcar outside to go to his rooming house, 4412 46th st. nw., when Private Stewart drove up.

Tells of Scuffle

The officer, he said, called him "a collegiate punk," grabbed him and the two started to scuffle. He said Stewart hit him on the back of the head with a blackjack. He could not recall how he received two gashes on the forehead.

Fitzpatrick is a junior at Georgetown's foreign service school. A native of Boston, he spent two years overseas as a radioman in the United States Signal Corps.

Tax Bill Sent To President

labor bills were mentioned yesterday at a White House conference called to discuss continuance of Maritime Commission authority to operate oil tankers and continued export and priority controls over several hundred scarce articles.

The two Democratic members of the "Big Six"—House Minority Leader Sam Rayburn (Tex.) and Senate Minority Leader Alben W. Barkley (Ky.)—lingered with the President for a private talk. They did not say what was discussed.

Congressional sources, however, believed the President already has made up his mind to veto the tax bill, and it is merely a matter of timing his message. Some believed he would message his veto to Congress Monday before he leaves on his Canadian trip.

Ross told reporters today's Cabinet session was merely advanced from Friday to accommodate the President.

Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder, however, canceled a Jackson Day address in Los Angeles today, in order to attend the meeting. In a wire to James Roosevelt, chairman of the California State Democratic Committee.

Snyder said the Cabinet meeting had been called due to "congressional action" Tuesday and it was "mandatory" for him to attend.

Sugar Ration Lifting Near, Says Anderson

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Removal of sugar rationing and price controls is "getting very close," Secretary of Agriculture Anderson told a Senate Banking Subcommittee yesterday.

The date for lifting rationing of sugar, the last remaining item on the wartime ration list, depends upon three developments, he said. These are:

(1) Next Monday the International Emergency Food Council will reconsider its 1947 allocations of Cuban sugar.

On February 21, IEFC granted the United States a year's allocation of 6.8 million tons, much of it from Cuba. Since then Cuban production has developed far beyond earlier estimates, making larger allocations possible.

(2) Many of the 25 claimant nations among which IEFC divided the year's production have not claimed all granted them. The remainder may now be distributed to other claimants, including the United States, where supplies are still short.

(3) A report is expected soon from Lawrence Myers, deputy chief of the sugar branch of the Production and Marketing Administration, who is now in Java surveying the sugar situation there.

Large sugar supplies are reportedly in Java. They consist of stocks that were seized during the war by Japanese armies.

Since liberation, efforts have been made to turn this sugar back to the original owners. The amount claimed, however, totals many times the amount retaken from the Japs. Until the question of ownership of this sugar is determined, distribution will be delayed.

Anderson was one of several witnesses called before the Senate group studying a proposal by Republican Senators Joseph R. McCarthy (Wis.) and John W. Bricker (Ohio) to scrap all controls but those on sugar inventories right now.

The Secretary indicated such legislation may not be necessary.

"It is my judgment," he said, "that we are getting very close to a point where household rationing might be abandoned.

He termed a prediction by McCarthy that removal of price controls would increase sugar 2½ cents a pound as a "pretty fair estimate."

School Texts Given Clean Bill by Three D.C. Officials

No Un-American Passages Found In Book or Letter, Say Board Members

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The superintendent of schools and two members of the board of education sharply disagreed yesterday with Board Member Adelbert W. Lee that a textbook and a weekly news review used in the public schools contain un-American teachings.

In a report to the board, Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning said that an examination of the textbook, "Building Citizenship," by H. O. Hughes, failed to reveal objectionable passages. Corning's report accused Lee of taking "many brief statements from the context of a good textbook," thereby presenting an untrue picture of the book.

As for the news letter,' the "American Observer," Corning's report defended it as presenting both sides of a controversial issue.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the school board, said she believed the basis of the book is "patriotism and citizenship."

"It teaches boys and girls to think," she said. "All I ask is that we have boys and girls who think about our Government. They are the patriots of the future."

Dr. James A. Gannon, physician member of the board, described Lee's charges as "reckless and unfounded."

"I defy any fair-minded reader to find any passage in the book which is even a little bit pink," he said. He accused Lee of making "unsubstantiated accusations" and failing to use "mature judgment."

Lee stuck to his guns.

"I have no apology to make," he said. "I presented certain data which I thought and continue to think is un-American. I still think the textbook objectionable."

An investigation into Lee's charges by a House District subcommittee has been authorized.

Corning recommended that use of the book and the news letter be continued in the schools.

The board postponed action on the recommendation after Mrs. Doyle suggested that members take time to look into the book and the ten-page report presented by Corning.

The Corning report was prepared by George J. Jones, head of social studies for white schools, and William M. Brewer, head of social studies for the Negro schools.

Worst Is Over For Jobholders

fewer Federal people here from the wartime peaks.

But I still can't tell you where you can rent a two-room apartment.

The major reductions, of course, have been in the War and Navy Departments which are currently under fire in Congress on a charge of being "overstaffed."

In the departmental offices here of the War Department in October, 1942, were a record number of 51,761 civilians. Today the number is less than 17,000 and it would be further sliced to about 13,000 under the department's 1948 budget as recommended to the House.

Navy Cuts Less Spectacular

The over-all Navy cut has been less spectacular, from about 49,000 to 34,000. These figures include both departments and field civilian employes here and nearby. However, Navy reduced a larger number of military people.

But what's ahead—that's the $64 question.

Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming told a House committee this week that it's estimated there will be 1,800,000 civilian employes in this country on July 1. In making that prediction, he foresees a reduction of about 150,000 employes during the months of April, May, and June.

Unofficially, it's estimated the number of Government people who have or will be laid off in that quarter will be between 12,000 and 15,000.

The exact number won't be known until Congress completes action on the 1948 budgets for Federal agencies.

Funds to Move Requested

The Public Buildings Administration has requested funds to move a dozen Federal agencies back to this city within the next few months. If the funds are approved, it will mean this city will have about 5000 more Federal jobs and that the transfers will offset some of the lay-offs now taking place.

These are among the agencies seeking to be transferred here:

Securities and Exchange and the Immigration and Naturalization Service from Philadelphia; National Park Service, Indian Affairs, Fish and Wildlife, Federal Deposit Insurance, and Alien Property offices from Chicago; the Employes Compensation and the 1500-man staff of the Veterans Administration's actuarial insurance division in New York, and the Civil Service regional office from North Carolina.

About 4000 jobs would be created in this city under the President's Federal worker loyalty plan now under consideration by Congress. The jobs would be in the Civil Service Commission and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The Atomic Energy Commission is expanding. The agency is getting employes it needs by transfer from the old Manhattan project.

Also, the National Labor Relations Board would add several hundred employes here if the Taft labor bill becomes law.

RFC: Harley Hise, a San Francisco banker, is reported to be the next member of the board of directors of Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He will replace Charles Henderson whose resignation is to be accepted as of June 30.

COMMERCE: David E. K. Bruce has been appointed special assistant to the Commerce secretary in charge of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. He'll be the new Assistant Secretary if Congress creates the post as requested by the President.

AGRICULTURE: Its big Production and Marketing Administration is preparing to withdraw more than 2000 lay-off notices it gave out last week. Meantime, the solicitor's office will give out notices to about 75 people here on Friday.

Night Sandhogs 'Break Through' Dupont Circle Sewer Tunnels

"FANCY MEETING YOU HERE!"—Bill Janshen, foreman of a night crew of "sandhogs," is greeted with a handshake from Jack Bridges after setting off the dynamite blast last night which joined underground two sections of a 1223-foot drainage tunnel from Dupont Circle

Post Staff Photos—Keller

TUNNEL TERMINUS—When another section of the Dupont Circle drainage tunnel is completed it will open on Rock Creek at a point (arrow) near the P st. bridge. It will accommodate a three-foot, concrete-tile storm sewer which will carry away surface water from the underpass

The cheering that wasn't heard by residents aroung 20th and P sts. nw. last night was neither weak nor unjustified.

It was only that it took place some 40-feet underground, in a dimly lit tunnel where six "sandhogs" and their boss shouted their triumphs over their compatriots, the absent day shift.

'Cause the night crew, under speed-up induced by rivalry and not bonuses, "broke through" to connect two 5-foot underground tunnels totaling 1223 feet, westward from Dupont Circle. They laughed over what they termed "deliberate attempts of the day workers to time this job so they'd be the ones to break it through."

The tunnel, with another 604 feet already dug still further westward and 247 more feet to be excavated, will accommodate a 3-foot, concrete tile storm sewer to carry away surface water for the projected Dupont Circle over and underpasses.

Night foreman of the "sandhogs," Bill Janshen, took the honor of first inspection of the breakthrough. He crept forward, following the "safety factor" time limit after final blasting, to find the passage cleared between the two tunnels. He gave the signal for his men to follow and view their triumph.

Working with him were Jack Bridges, of Baltimore; Jimmy Hutchinson, of District Heights, Md., Clifford Gibbins, of 416 11th st. ne., and the three Kygers, Art, George and Lynn, all of Harrisonburg, Va.

All recounted their efforts in "mucking," or cleaning up the loose debris left by the daytime blasters, so they could set the final dynamite charges and blast them off before the 7 p. m. deadline on such operations. The charges were detonated at 6:55 p. m.

"The day boys didn't think we could do it," said one of the Kygers.

The storm sewer, to cost an estimated $185,000, runs under the north side of P st. westward to Rock Creek.

New View Of Medical Setup in Army Urged

Maj. Gen. Hawley Proposes Select Corps For War, Another For Peacetime Work

A revolutionary change in the Army Medical Corps was suggested last night by Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, Veterans' Administration medical director.

He proposed a medical organization to care for the Army's sick and wounded during peacetime and a smaller, select medical corps to be trained specifically for war.

"The primary and practically the only objective of peacetime training of the armed forces is immediate preparation for war," General Hawley declared at a banquet held at the Washington Hotel for doctors attending the Army Medical Center's three-day symposium.

Missions Differ

The general said that a first class medical corps cannot be developed so long as it is given one primary mission in peace and a totally different mission in war.

"This," he asserted, "is the equivalent of training a race horse by working him on the plow."

General Hawley said it mattered little what particular type of medical organization is created to take care of the Army's clinical work in peace.

"It might be," he said, "a military corps of the same type, and with the same training objectives, as the one to be created in the proposed (armed forces reorganization) bill."

Or, he continued, it could be a civilian agency modeled after the Department of Medicine and Surgery of VA, with both full-time and part-time medical men.

Mission Is Important

"The important thing," he declared, "is that the sole mission of this corps would be the practice of clinical medicine and its principal objective that of developing the finest clinicians in the country."

General Hawley said it was of "utmost importance" that there be a much smaller group of medical officers "whose basic training objective is in readiness for war."

"A 15-year training program for these officers," he said, "should include formal training in hospital administration, in public health, in medical supply, in medical planning, and in staff and command relationships."

Critically reviewing the Medical Corps present training program, the general declared: "It is high time we depart from the sixteenth century concept of medical organization and training."

Last night's banquet was preceded by morning and afternoon symposium sessions at the Army Medical Center. A morning and afternoon session today will conclude the symposium.

Law Institute Opens Annual Meeting Here

Justice Burton Speaks Today, Judge Hand At Dinner Tomorrow

The American Law Institute—lawyers, judges and law teachers—yesterday opened preliminary sessions of its twenty-fourth annual meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

The three-day meeting is the first held in Washington in five years and will deal largely with the consideration of the code of commercial law. Yesterday's opening meeting consisted of registration and a 9:30 p. m. reception.

The institute proper will get under way at 10 a. m. today with an expected attendance of more than 400. Principal speakers at the morning session will be Institute President George Wharton Pepper of Philadelphia and Supreme Court Justice Harold W. Burton.

One of the highlights of today's program will be a reception at the British Embassy.

The institute's annual dinner will be held at 8 p. m. tomorrow, with Judge Learned Hand of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals as principal speaker.

Judicial Circuit Parley To Discuss Court Reform

Discussion of proposals to abolish the present preliminary procedure in domestic relations cases will highlight the morning session of the judicial circuit conference in the Court of Appeals tomorrow.

George Maurice Morris will preside at the morning session scheduled to open at 10 a. m.

Other topics to be discussed during the morning include questions pertaining to administration of estates and disbarment of lawyer-practitioners.

Milton W. King will preside at the afternoon session starting at 2 p. m. during which discussions will be held on methods of assigning criminal cases for trial and suggestions will be made for improvements in procedure and facilities for the benefit of witnesses.

Discussion leaders will include James Craig Peacock, Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post; Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, Charles E. Ford, Leo A. Rover, John J. Wilson and a number of other attorneys.

Pan American Union Installs Dr. Camargo

Dr. Alberto Lleras Camargo of Colombia was installed yesterday as director general of the Pan American Union, the first Latin American ever to head the organization.

The installation took place at a special session of the Union's governing board attended by representatives of 21 American republics.

In his acceptance speech, Dr. Camargo paid tribute to his predecessor, the late Dr. Leo S. Rowe, "who for 26 years gave to this institution a prestige and a force which were only possible of achievement under one of his excellent qualities . . ."

The new director general stated that he considered his new position one of the greatest tasks that he has ever undertaken and expressed the opinion that this is a critical moment in the history of the Pan American movement "which must speedily justify the need for its continued existence within the framework of the United Nations organization."

The director general asked that past ties of friendship of the 21 governments comprising the Pan American Union be strengthened still more during the future.

Curley Asks Court to Stay His Sentence

By The Associated Press

Counsel for Mayor James M. Curley of Boston yesterday asked the United States Court of Appeals here to stay his sentence of conviction on mail fraud charges.

The attorneys asked the stay pending disposition of a petition for rehearing which they expect to file later in the Supreme Court.

The high tribunal last Monday refused, 4 to 1, to review Curley's conviction. The court rarely grants requests for reconsideration.

The 72-year-old Mayor is under sentence of 6 to 18 months imprisonment. He also was fined $1000, and is now free under bond.

Court of Appeals rules give the Justice Department five days in which to reply to Curley's latest move.

Officials of the Appeals Court said that a stay was asked today for Curley only. The Supreme Court last Monday also refused to review the case of Curley's co-defendant, Donald Wakefield Smith, a former member of the National Labor Relations Board. Smith is under sentence of 4 to 12 months imprisonment and was fined $1000.

Detective Hurt In Fall Improves At Emergency

Detective Sergt. Howard E. Ogle, who suffered severe back injuries early Tuesday when he crashed through a second-floor porch railing, was reported improved at Emergency Hospital yesterday.

Ogle, who is 49, was scuffling with a man wanted on an assault charge whon he went through the railing at 736 8th st. nw., and fell 10 feet to a concrete stairway.

Although X-rays have not been taken, police officials said yesterday Ogle's back apparently is not broken, as was first feared.

The man he was attempting to arrest, John J. Doyle, 26, of 603 Eye st. nw., was released on $300 bond in connection with an assault on Miss Genevieve Holbrook, of 711 G st. nw. No charge has been made in connection with Ogle's case pending outcome of his injury.

Women Stage Battle Over Eviction Suit

30-Day Grace Period Revoked by Judge Following Attack

A women's room battle which flared in Municipal Court yesterday cost one housewife her home, charged her with contempt of court and sent another to the hospital.

Judge Thomas D. Quinn had heard an eviction suit against Mr. and Mrs. John Reagan of 3123 Knox st. se., and had granted a 30-day period for them to move.

At the conclusion of the hearing, Mrs. Reagan and one of the women who had testified against the Reagans, Mrs. Gladys Moore, 23, of 3121 Knox st. se., were in the women's room of Landlord and Tenant's Court.

According to witnesses, Mrs. Reagan attacked Mrs. Moore, who was treated at Casualty Hospital for cuts and bruises on the head.

Mrs. Reagan called back before Judge Quinn, who released her on $500 bond for contempt of court and revoked the 30-day grace period for eviction.

Testimony showed that Reagan had knocked holes in the walls of his house with a poker. He said he was merely rapping on the walls to keep neighbors quiet.

Plaintiff in the eviction hearing was the National Capital Housing Authority.

Boys' Club Membership Drive Started

Some 200 Boys Club boosters turned out last night to spark the membership drive for 1000 new clubmates by July 1 in the Boys Club of Washington, D. C., Inc.

Occasion was the awarding of prizes in the organization's slogan contest which preceded the drive for a total of 5000 members by July. The "kickoff" meeting was held at the club's eastern branch gymnasium, 17th and Massachusetts ave. se.

First prize went to Dino Pompieri, 12, a sixth-grade student at the Wheatley School, for his slogan:

"The Boys' Club Is Great—That Goes Double.
It Sure Does Keep Us Out of Trouble."

Dino, youngest in the Pompieri family of five children, at 1325 Queen st. ne., won a free, two-week vacation trip at Camp Reeder, summer camp on the Wicomico River, near Victoria, Md.

Two brothers came in for second and third-place honors in the slogan contest. They are George, 8, and John Playfair, 12, of 1616 E st. se., who were awarded a club jacket and year's club membership, respectively.

Fourth-place prize, a T-shirt, was awarded to Albert Molenoff, 14, of 1541 A st. se.

The rally was addressed by Charles M. Fyfe, executive director of the organization, who stressed the values of joining the low-cost, nonprofit organization. Charles Reynolds, director of the eastern branch, was in charge of festivities.

George Fay to Speak

George M. Fay, U. S. Attorney for the District, will be the guest speaker at the regular Junior Board of Commerce luncheon today at 12:30 in the Burlington Hotel, 1120 Vermont ave. nw.

City News in Brief

Potomac Park Tree First Case In D. C. of Dutch Elm Disease

First case of the deadly Dutch Elm disease has been discovered in the District, it was disclosed yesterday.

National Capital Parks Plant Pathologist Horace V. Wester said an infected elm was found in West Potomac Park south of the Reflecting Pool. The tree was about 14 inches in diameter and about 40 feet high.

Workmen immediately chopped it down, burned it in an effort to prevent further spread of the fungus, and scoured the area for other possibly infected trees.

Experts had feared the disease would spread to District elms after learning it had attacked elms at Seneca, Md., about 20 miles from here. To prevent devastation among the estimated 30,000 planted elms in the District, and those growing wild in park areas, the National Capital Parks office, the District government and the Agriculture Department are spraying all elms in the District.

Fails to Appear

Friends, and a professional bondsman, were concerned last night over the disappearance of James O'Brien, 27, one time tail gunner with the Army Air Forces, who left home on the eve of arraignment in traffic court on a reckless driving charge.

O'Brien failed to answer to his name in traffic court yesterday. His bondsman explained that the defendant left his lodging house at 300 15th st. se. Tuesday evening and did not return. Judge Armond Scott rescheduled the hearing for next Wednesday continuing the defendant's $500 bond.

Raven's Talk Fit for Tomb

Maybe a raven can't say "nevermore" but he has a whole vocabulary of bleak and shuddery sounds straight from the tomb.

A Smithsonian bulletin said studies by Arthur Cleveland Bent of Taunton, Mass., a National Museum associate, disclose these raven calls:

"Haw-haw-haw"—a hollow sepulchral (that's from the tomb) laugh.

"Crawks"—sounded while the raven is in flight.

"Ge-lick-ge-lee"—a weird note that bobs up amid the "crawks."

"Thung-thung-thung" — like the twang of a tuning fork.

The raven also makes a sort of "gargling" sound while talking to itself.

678 Tokens Received

A total of 678 obsolete Capital Transit tokens and $29.50 in cash were received yesterday by the Children's Hospital.

Since the Transit company invalidated the tokens May 11, and the Post's District Line column suggested that they be sent to the hospital, 4305 envelopes have been received, containing 21,135 tokens, and $401.39 in cash. The tokens have been redeemed for $1761.25.

ABC Decision Withheld

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday withheld a decision in the case of Frank Corber, owner of the Club Liberty, 910 5th st. nw., who faced 10 charges in a hearing yesterday.

Five inspectors charged Corber with failing to have records available to inspectors; failing to have the stock room key available; failing to report employment of one worker; failing to have labels on beer bottles and failing to cancel whisky bottle stamps.

Sage on Ice

"The iceman cometh," remarked Municipal Court Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday as seven men charged with selling ice without a license appeared before him. Casey suspended $10 fines.

Judge Scores Vice Squad as He Frees Girl

Tactics used by vice squad members in making prostitution arrests were criticized yesterday by Justice Aubrey Fennell in Municipal Court.

A woman's word won out as Justice Fennell dismissed charges of soliciting for prostitution against a 22-year-old defendant.

"I don't believe you any more than I believe her," the justice told Vice Squad Detective Louis Fochette. "I often hear from vice squad men stories which would indicate that women literally pursue them into their cars.

"It never happens to me."

The detective said the young woman got into his car as it was parked on a downtown street and solicited him.

She testified the detective called to her as she walked along the street, then got out of his car and tried to start a conversation with her as she walked on.

Gallinger Inmate Dealt 13 Clubs; Guard Passes

Thirteen clubs were dealt a 66-year-old inmate of Gallinger Hospital's psycho ward last night—amazing their guard but leaving the bridge players undismayed.

Police Pvt. J. H. Guinn, detailed from Precinct 5 to guard the men, couldn't stand the nonchalance. He called reporters.

Guinn, bewildered, reported the only comment came from the lucky hand-holder:

"I can't tell my friends—they'd ask me where it happened."

Southeastern University Graduates 85

Eighty-five Southeastern University students were graduated at ceremonies in the Department of Interior auditorium last night.

An audience of 400 saw 59 men and women receive bachelor of commercial science degrees and 26 receive master of commercial science degrees. It was the university's fortieth graduating class.

In the audience was Mrs. Addie L. Dawson, 1133 S. Thomas st., Arlington, who attended the exercises on a stretcher.

Mrs. Dawson, 62, who broke her right shoulder Christmas night, beamed as her youngest son, Richard L. Dawson, 30, received his BCS degree.

Dr. Paul F. Douglass, American University president, in his graduation address, counseled the class to "think straight, talk straight, live straight."

He advised them to follow a hobby such as "bird study or sailing."

Raymond A. Nett and Curtis Ray Delly were rewarded keys for the highest and second highest scholastic averages, respectively.

Jury Holds Girl's Death Accidental

Bus Driver Freed In Crash at 13th And Farragut Feb. 14

A coroner's jury yesterday declared accidental the death of a 16-year-old girl in a bus-automobile collision as she returned home last February from a Valentine Day dance.

John A. Prizzi, 29, bus driver, 2424 North Capitol st., who had been held for action of the coroner, was freed by the jury which deliberated half an hour.

Charles L. Goodrich, 16, of 4344 Forest la. nw., driver of the car in which the victim, Harriet Livingston Winslow, of 15 East Lenox st., Chevy Chase, was riding, testified that he could not remember the collision or details leading up to it.

The blond-haired youth, a student at St. Alban's School, was seriously injured in the accident. He spoke in a whisper and under questioning by his attorney, William E. Leahy, said he still faced hospitalization for his injuries.

In a statement read at the inquest, Prizzi said he was driving an empty Capital Transit bus to the garage when the collision occurred at 13th and Farragut sts. nw. He said he was driving at less than 25 miles an hour.

Frederick G. Williams of the Police Accident Investigation Unit, testified that after the collision the bus side-slipped down 13th st., mounted the curb, rolled over the sidewalk, climbed a retaining wall and crashed into the front porch of a house.

Two friends of young Goodrich, Michael Keane, 17, of 2917 Glover dr. nw., and Robert Owers, 16, of 118 Woodlawn ave. nw., who were in a car behind Goodrich, testified Goodrich stopped his car before entering the intersection. They said the bus was going at high speed.

Mrs. John R. Hill Wins Divorce on Cruelty Grounds

Mrs. Persis Myers Hill of Washington was awarded a divorce yesterday in Reno, Nev., from John Rowland Hill, local investment broker, on grounds of extreme mental cruelty, the Associated Press reported.

The Hills were married June 2, 1934. They have two children, Rowland Myers Hill, 9, and Evelyn Chase Hill, 6. Custody of the children and property rights were settled in a sealed agreement.

Hill, reached last night at his present residence, 2124 Bancroft pl. nw., declined comment.

PEPCO Financial Hearing Delayed To Next Tuesday

The Public Utilities Commission investigation of Potomac Electric Power Co. finances for 1946, scheduled to begin this morning, has been postponed until Tuesday, June 10.

PUC announced the change yesterday. Tuesday's session will begin at 10 a. m. in the District Building board room.

The postponement will enable PUC members to attend a Senate District Committee hearing today at 10 a. m. The Senate group will consider the appointment of James Lauderdale for a full term as a member of the Public Utilities Commission.

PUC members and representatives of the CIO, which has voiced opposition to Lauderdale's appointment, are expected to testify.

Funds for TB Survey Here Face Study

Funds for the proposed tuberculosis survey will be studied thoroughly by the House District Appropriations Subcommittee, Chairman Walt Horan (R., Wash.) said yesterday.

He said the TB survey proposal was discussed briefly during his subcommittee's executive session with city health officials.

Horan cited views voiced earlier by District officials that if the survey is made it would probably increase the load on municipal institutions treating TB.

"If you find more TB patients, that would increase the city's obligations for treatment," he said.

Horan said his subcommittee had asked Health Officer George C. Ruhland to prepare statistics on present city health resources, including hospitals, doctors, and auxiliary services.

He said this information would be the first step in a subcommittee survey of all District health facilities.

Testimony of health officials showed that cancer, TB, and syphilis are major problems in Washington, Horan said.

The fact that the health department treated some 13,000 cases of syphilis last year showed the disease is still "a real problem" here, Horan said.

He said a supplemental request for $23,000 in District money, to be matched by nearly $13,000 in Federal funds, for case finding and prevention of cancer and TB had been presented to his subcommittee.

The main problem still overhanging the budget studies was the need for increased revenue, he said.

Edie Relatives Will Receive Some Money

Although they were ignored in his will, relatives of retired Naval Capt. John Rufus Edie will receive some of his money.

A settlement agreement reached between the litigants in the will contest which has been before a District Court jury allows $7000 each to Captain Edie's niece and two nephews.

Principal beneficiary of the estate, valued in excess of $375,000, is St. John's Episcopal Church. Through its attorneys, Spencer Gordon and John Lord O'Brian, the church yesterday agreed to give the relatives $7000 each and to pay an additional $3500 each to two great nephews and two great nieces who had not contested the will.

Associate Justice Jennings Bailey had prepared to rule that no undue influence had been exercised on Captain Edie at the time the will was drawn and had directed the jury to find that the late captain was of sound mind.

Under the agreement, the relatives who will receive $7000 each are Mrs. Aileen O'Donnell Baltazzi, 2905 Q st. nw.; John C. O'Donnell of New York City and Charles C. O'Donnell of North Bend, Oreg.

The relatives were represented by J. Edward Burroughs, jr., and William P. Arnold.

Woman, 69, Gun Victim, 'Sinking Fast'

Mrs. Madge B. Fitzgerald, 69, mother-in-law victim of a triple shooting here Tuesday, was reported "sinking fast" as Casualty Hospital last night, paralyzed from the waist down.

Her son-in-law, Henry T. Wright, 72, a former Treasury Department guard, was reported "still critical" and under police guard at Gallinger Hospital. Wright, police said, fatally wounded his wife, Lulu Belle, 49, a clerk with the Bureau of Internal Reevnue, and then shot her mother before putting a bullet in his own brain.

A brain surgeon at Gallinger Hospital operated on Wright yesterday, removing the .22-caliber lead slug from the frontal portion of his brain. He was later given some chance to recover. Police said the shootings at the Wright home, 913 Perry pl. ne., were blamed by the mother-in-law on marital difficulties of the Wrights.

Treed

Battle Plan, Password Trip Prowler

Stealthy footsteps in the night, a challenge that went unanswered, a dark form climbing a tree, two Army officers in pursuit with drawn guns . . .

The description would fit a scene on a Pacific island two or three years ago, but it applied to the capture of an intruder in a guest house at 2011 Wyoming ave. nw., early yesterday morning.

A password identification system prearranged by the 30 tenants there, together with a "battle" plan, led to the capture.

The roomers, who had been alarmed by the snatching of Mrs. Anne Maddox's purse in the driveway of the place about three weeks before, had decided on the password "sweet potato," which should be answered by any of the tenants when challenged in the house.

Miss Renee Hausenstein, a language teacher who lives there, did not get the yam message when she shouted, "What is the password?" at a prowler she heard outside her door. She roused other tenants as the intruder fled out a third-story window to a tree on the lawn.

Twenty-four of the roomers went into action, according to Mrs. Mildred C. Fleming, landlady, who later described her guests as "one big, happy family." Two Army officers, Capt. Harry Harris and Maj. Evan Parker, brandishing .45 caliber automatics, and the others, wielding an assortment of domestic weapons, chased the treed prowler even farther upward, to the steep gabled roof. He was captured when three policemen arrived and forced the man, James T. Thomas, dishwasher, 1528 Swann st. sw., to come down. He slid down a drain pipe, and was held for investigation.

Mrs. Fleming said all her guests would know the new password by bedtime last night.

FAO to Occupy Dupont Circle Apartments Soon

FAO, the Food and Agriculture Organization of United Nations, soon will take over the Dupont Circle Apartments now occupied by United Nations Rehabilitation and Relief Administration, UNRRA.

FAO units already occupy more than a floor at the Dupont Building, it was learned yesterday. UNRRA plans gradually to give up more space until liquidation of the organization is completed.

FAO now occupies six building, five of them large houses, which will be vacated. These are the Grafton Hotel Annex, 1735 DeSales st. nw.; 2010 and 2000 Massachusetts ave. nw., and 1520, 1706 and 1708 New Hampshire ave. nw.

The modern and fully equipped building, scheduled for completion by January 1, is to to be erected on 6th st. sw., between H and I sts., replacing the present small quarters at 472 I st. sw. In answer to the need for a larger clubhouse in the area, it will take care of hundreds of boys daily. A large gym will be on the first floor

Watt Named As Captain of No. 9 Firemen

The Commissioners yesterday advanced Fire Lieut. Walter Watt to the rank of captain to fill the vacancy left by the retirement of Capt. Raymond E. Huntt.

Watt

The promotion was effective June 1, the Commissioners said.

Watt, a veteran of 22 years with the local fire department, will become captain of No. 9 Engine Company. He has been in charge of the department's repair shop for the past 14 months.

Since joining the force April 9, 1926, he has served in every administrative branch of the department, including five years as an instructor and duty at four fire-fighting companies.

He lives with his wife, Kathryn, at 4998 Newport ave., Glen Cove, Md.

The Commissioners also announced that Sergt. Ray A. Turner had been advanced to the rank of lieutenant, and Pvt. Charles J. Clarke to sergeant to fill the vacancies left by promotions.

Lutheran Ministers Attend School Here

Lutheran ministers from the District and several States are attending a school of social missions in Hurst Hall, American University.

The sessions opened Tuesday, and will continue through tomorrow under leadership of Dr. C. S. Koch, executive secretary of the board of social missions, United Lutheran Church in America. There are daily lectures beginning at 10 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., and seminars from 2:30 to 4 p. m.

Row Develops

Deeds Office Shift Argued In Hearing

Sharp conflict over transferring the Recorder of Deeds Office to control of the District Commissioners developed yesterday in a House District Judiciary Subcommittee hearing.

Witnesses, however, generally favored modernizing the office by doing away with the present typewriter system for copying documents and installing photographic copying methods.

Acting Subcommittee Chairman John J. Allen, jr. (R., Calif) said the hearing would continue at 9:45 a. m. tomorrow in Room 445, Old House Office Building.

Horan, Shepard at Odds

Main dispute was between House District Appropriations Chairman Walt Horan (R., Wash.), author of the bill to transfer the office to the Commissioners, and Recorder of Deeds, Dr. Marshall L. Shepard, who said he saw "absolutely no advantage in the bill."

Each testified in turn and did not discuss the issue directly with each other. Horan said he had talked the plan over with Dr. Shepard and found his attitude "fair, wise and intelligent," although they disagreed.

Horan said this was the purpose of his bill:

"To provide a remedy for another of the formless and irresponsible spheres of independent activity which when added to many other similarly independent activities make up the present District government."

Office Termed "Floating Rib"

Horan said the office was a "floating rib" of local government. He said the job, filled by the President's appointment, has been a patronage position, not reserved for a District resident. He said the Negroes who had held the office had served with credit to their race.

20 Teachers Retire From D. C. Schools

The voluntary retirement of 20 teachers from the District public schools was announced yesterday by the Board of Education.

All but two of the teachers have more than 30 years of service and six have taught in District schools for more than 40 years. The teachers are:

Full Military Honors Are Paid Carlson at Arlington Rites

Brig. Gen. Evans Fordyce Carlson was buried with military honors yesterday beneath a bright sun on the highest mound of Arlington National Cemetery.

In a brief and simple service in Fort Myer Chapel, his family and a small gathering of friends heard the famed Marine Raider leader extolled as a great and courageous officer.

Comdr. Alvo Marsha, Navy chaplain, conducted services at the chapel and the graveside of Carlson, who died May 27 at Emanuel Hospital in Portland, Oreg. He was 51 years old.

Borne on Caisson

From the chapel, the flag-draped coffin was born on a caisson to the grave, while a cannon was fired at one-minute intervals.

The procession was led by the United States Marine Band, followed by four platoons of Marines. A black horse, with empty saddle and with boots turned backward in the stirrups, followed the caisson, in full, formal military honor.

Services at the grave consisted of a brief prayer, three volleys of rifles, an 11-gun salute of the cannon, and finally "Taps."

Flag Given to Widow

General Carlson's widow, Mrs. Peggy Tatum Carlson, accepted the folded American flag, taken from the coffin, from Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, commandant of the Marine Corps. Other survivors, including a son by a previous marriage, Capt. Evans Charles Carlson, USMC, and the general's father, Thomas A. Carlson, stood at her side.

Pallbearers were Rear Admiral M. D. Willcutts, USN; Rear Admiral H. L. Pugh, USN; Brig. Gen. E. E. Hall, USMC (retired); Brig. Gen. F. S. Robiliard, USMC; Col. R. N. Pate, USMC, and Col. J. M. Chambers, USMCR (retired).

John Morisi

John Morisi, 85, a retired merchant who lived here for 60 years, died yesterday at his home, 1774 Columbia rd. nw.

Born near Milan, Italy, Mr. Morisi went to Paris, France, after university graduation, and married Maria Anna Solari. She died in 1922. He came to this country and to Washington in 1887, and had lived here since, becoming a citizen in 1892. He retired in 1926 after 39 years in business here.

Surviving are three daughters, Misses Margaret, Louise and Agnes Morisi, all of the Columbia rd. address.

Requiem mass will be said at 9 a. m. Saturday at St. Paul's Church, 15th and V sts. nw. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Thomas H. Everritt

Thomas H. Everitt, 74, former Maryland correspondent for The Post and veteran newspaperman, died yesterday at Georgetown Hospital after a long illness.

A native of Eufaula, Ala., Mr. Everritt had lived in the District area since 1918, moving to Washington from Montgomery County about nine years ago. He began his newspaper career nearly 30 years ago and, beside The Post, was associated with the Washington Daily News, the Times-Herald and the Cosmopolitan News Service.

After leaving newspaper work, he accepted a position with the Solid Fuels Administration during the war and worked there for about a year until his retirement a year ago.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Everritt, who lives at 1211 13th st. nw.; a daughter, Mrs. Babette Griffith, of Silver Spring, Md., and three grandchildren. Arrangements for his funeral, which will be private, have not been completed.

William Dunn Patten

Los Angeles, June 4 (U.P.)—Los Angeles, June 4 (U.P.)—Chemist William Dunn Patten, 82, who claimed to be the inventor of baking powder, died today at his home. Owner of the West Vaco Chlorine Products Co., New York, Patten came here eight years ago for his health.

E. E. Kornitzer

Emanuel E. Kornitzer, 58, fiscal accountant with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation died yesterday afternoon at Mount Alto Hospital after an illness of several months.

A native of Vienna, Austria, Mr. Kornitzer came to this country shortly before World War I, enlisted in the Army and saw several months of service in France during the latter stages of the war. He had been employed by the RFC for several years prior to his death.

His only survivor is his wife, Dr. Henrietta Goldsmith Kornitzer of 1726 Hobart st. nw. Private funeral services will be held at Fort Myer Chapel tomorrow at 1 p. m., with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

William Waldman

Funeral services for William Waldman, 63, 340 Decatur st. nw., who died Tuesday at his home after a short illness, will be held at the Bernard Danzansky funeral home today at 2 p. m. Burial will be in the District of Columbia [illegible] Cemetery.

Mr. Waldman, a retired grocer, is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mollie Waldman; a son, Rubin Waldman, 2030 32d pl. se.; a daughter, Mrs. Dorothy W. Hillman, 519 Quackenbush st. nw., and four grandchildren.

Aussies Willing to Share Manus Isle as Base

Canberra, June 4 (AP).—Australia announced today that she intends to build a naval base on strategic Manus Island, and said she would "welcome an arrangement for its joint use by the United States on a principle of reciprocity."

Political observers expressed the belief that Australia and the United States were near an agreement on the future of the southwestern Pacific island, where the United States built a 250,000,000 base during the war after driving the Japanese from the Admiralty group.

The United States has indicated that it would like to maintain a permanent base on Manus, which is under Australian mandate. The island, lying north of New Guinea, contains several airfields built by the Americans and a large natural harbor.

Horses Held Sole Interest of Couple in Bed

London, June 4 (U.P.).—Divorce court Judge John Wallington accepted as a fact today Maj. Patrick Pole-Carew's evidence that he found his wife asleep in bed with Thomas Chisman, riding master. The judge ruled however, there had been no misconduct because "they have nothing in common except their mutual interest in horses."

He denied the major a divorce.

The 34-year-old major, who is now in a regiment on the Gold Coast in Africa, had testified that "I did not awaken them but went to my own bed and had a good night's sleep."

He explained that he did not awaken his wife on the January night, 1946, because he was a champion boxer and was afraid he would kill Chisman.

"I have seen the wife and Chisman and know their ages and antecedents," the judge said. "They have nothing in common except their mutual interest in horses. I accept their evidence that they have not committed misconduct."

The judge commented that both Pole-Carew and his wife came from families of "standing, culture and repute." However, he said, they "indulged in a modern type of life, having drinking and race parties which were supposed to bring happiness to those who indulged in them."

Versatile Squirrel Plays Like Kitten

Presidential Review Frees Convicted Officer

Berlin, June 4 (AP).—Lieut. Col. James G. Fisher of Wilmette, Ill., was released from confinement last weekend after a presidential review of his court martial conviction in November on charges of trading and conspiring to trade with the enemy.

The judge advocate, Col. L. A. Prichard, said today that Fisher's sentence to one year in prison was suspended, his fine of $2000 converted into a forfeiture of $500, and his dishonorable discharge from the Army revoked. Another case involving Fisher and Maj. Louis Dups, of Hollis, Long Island, N. Y., also of the decartelization branch, was dropped.

Tax Doubts Depress List In Late Deals

New York, June 4 (AP).—The stock market struggled to keep the recovery going today but the question of whether the President would sign the tax cut legislation touched off late offerings and threw many early gainers for losses.

Leading steels, motors, rails and special issues pushed up fractions to 2 or more points on a fairly active midday flurry. Dealings then slowed and prices wavered. Pressure was a bit more urgent in the final hour and declines running to a point or more were widely distributed at the close. Transfers expanded to 820,000 shares against 690,000 Tuesday. It was the largest total since last Thursday.

Short covering and timid investment bidding in the forenoon was credited to a slightly more optimistic view of the domestic trade situation, belief that a possible fall business recession may have been discounted by four successive falling market months and the thought that the list was due for more of a technical revival. Skeptics regarding the economic picture, taxes, labor and foreign affairs continued to lighten accounts.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was off .3 of a point at 61. It was the broadest session since May 22.

Stocks off a point or so included Zonite at 6, as directors took no action on a dividend; Bethelehem 78¾, Anaconda 33¾, and Great Northern Railway 38. On the downside were U. S. Steel, Republic Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Macy, Sears Roebuck, Boeing, Sperry, Consolidated Edison, Electric Power & Light, Kennecott, General Electric, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Santa Fe, New York Central, Pennsylvania Railroad, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Texas Co., Standard Oil of California, Pepsi-Cola and American Woolen.

Standard Oil (N. J.), in further reflection of record net, reached a 1947 peak and finished up ¾ at 72¾. Union Pacific was 2½ at 128½. Norfolk & Western 1 at 227½. Allied Chemical 1½ at 171 and U. S. Gypsum 1½ at 95.

Others ahead included Woolworth, J. I. Case, Deere, International Harvester, International Telephone, duPont, and Houston Light.

Selected bonds improved but many turned down at the last.

First 1947 Wheat Sells for $2.70

Kansas City, June 4 (AP).—The first car of new wheat from the big 1947 crop reached the Kansas City market from Texas today and sold at $2.70 a bushel, a record auction price for the initial car.

The car, which arrived five days later than last season, was shipped from near Fort Worth. It graded No. 1 hard winter, 62.8 pounds to the bushel, 15.3 per cent moisture and 11.25 per cent protein.

Zonite Omits Dividend

New York, June 4 (AP).—Zonite Products Corp. directors took no action on declaration of a cash dividend at their May meeting. The last previous payment was 15 cents March 20. Four quarterly disbursements of the same amount were made in 1946.

International PEN Group To Readmit German Writers

Zurich, Switzerland, June 4 (U.P.).—The International (P. E. N.) Club Congress of Poets, Essayists and Novelists voted, despite vigorous opposition, today to reinstate its German members who remained in the Reich during the Nazi regime.

However, it was decided to readmit the Germans as "consultants" rather than full members to placate the opposition, which came from delegates of countries occupied by the Germans. Later Johannes R. Becher, German Communist poet, and Author Ernest Wiechert said bitterly:

"Under these conditions we might as well drop the whole thing."

Vercours, the brilliant French resistance writer, and Belgian Louis Pierrard, led the opposition. But the support of Thomas Mann, who left his native Germany to carry on the fight against nazism, won the day for the Germans.

There were 19 votes for admission of the Germans, including that of the American, Elmer Rice. Nine delegations, all representing countries which the Germans occupied, abstained. The only negative votes came from the Hebrew authors Chaim Grade and Abraham Sockower.

Thomas Mann received a tremendous ovation when he greeted the congress with:

"Well, we have survived—Switzerland and I."

Hague Will Quit as Mayor

Jersey City, N. J., June 4 (AP).—Frank Hague, one of the last of the great American political bosses of a bygone era, summoned the press into his deeply carpeted inner office at City Hall today and announced his retirement as mayor.

Eggers

But he made it clear he intends to keep his power as city, county and State Democratic Party chieftain, as well as vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Democratic leader in New Jersey for three decades, high in the party's national councils, maker of Governors and U. S. Senators, the 71-year-old one-time railroad yard worker never aspired to higher office than the mayoralty post he filled for 30 years in this concentrated, industrial city of 300,000 across the Hudson River from New York.

In Affable Mood

He was in affable mood this morning as he stood, his erect, 6-foot frame towering over members of his official party, and said to the regular city hall reporters he had called in to see him: "I am retiring."

Hague said he would leave office on June 17, anniversary of his election as mayor for the first of his eight four-year terms. Exactly four years before that, he had been elected for the first time to the city commission.

The mayor announced that he would be succeeded by his nephew, Frank Hague Eggers. After Hague resigns June 16, the Hague-dominated city commission will go through the formality of selecting Eggers as mayor for an interim term to run until the next commission election in 1949.

Thus, Hague made it known officially that he was grooming his nephew as his successor.

Hague issued a statement, later in the day, explaining he was stepping out because he felt "the time has come when, in justice to my city and my family, I must pass on the heavy burden of administrative duties to younger men."

When hundreds of city employes, to whom the announcement came with shocking suddenness, crowded around his office to shake his hand and wish him well, Hague said:

"I'll be around. Don't worry. I'll be around for a long time."

His announcement and his decision to "be around" brought an entirely different reaction from the one Democratic Governor who had failed to follow his dictates when in office.

Charles Edison, Governor from 1941 to 1944, termed the Hague resignation "good news, but it does not, by any means, end Hagueism."

The former Navy Secretary, elected with Hague support, had quickly opposed any instructions from the Jersey City Mayor. Today, he said, "There is a big job of housecleaning to be done by the new organization that has been forming for some time past in Hudson County."

Gasperi Picks 2 Economists For Cabinet

Rome, Italy, June 4 (U.P.).—Premier Alcide de Gasperi today added two more ministers to his new cabinet, the Italian republic's first government to exclude Communists, and announced he would go before the assembly Monday to ask for a vote of confidence.

The Communist and leftwing Socialist parties continued to attack the new cabinet, and miners in Sardinia struck in "protest against the exclusion of the workers' representatives from the government."

At today's meeting the new ministers created a ministry for coordination of the budget under the direction of independent financial expert Luigi Einaudi, governor of the Bank of Italy.

Giuseppe Pella, Christian Democrat economist, was named minister of finance and Gustavo del Vecchio, noted for his work on monetary matters, became minister of the treasury.

Bilbo Faces Third Operation on Jaw

New Orleans, June 4 (U.P.).—Senator-Elect Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi will go under the knife for a third "reconstruction" operation on his jaw "within the next few days," doctors at Foundation Hospital said today. Bilbo had part of his jaw bone removed during an operation for cancer in January.

Chile's President Opposes Joint Anticommunist Pacts

Santiago, Chile, June 4 (U.P.).—President Gabriel Gonzalez Videla said today that he was opposed to joint inter-American action against communism. Each country, he said, should defend its own political institutions without resorting to restrictive international pacts.

On the eve of his departure for state visits to Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay, Gonzalez denied that his trip was connected with concerted anti-Communist action by those countries and Chile.

He stressed, instead, the need for closer economic ties among South American nations as the only means of creating real and permanent peace in this part of the world.

Gonzalez also rejected the idea that the trips may be connected with formation of a so-called "austral bloc" of the nations comprising the lower half of the South American Continent.

Divisions 10-13 To Hold 55th Drill Today, Tomorrow

The Twenty-fourth Regiment, Washington High School Cadet Corps, divisions 10-13, will hold its fifty-fifth annual company competitive drill today and tomorrow at Griffith Stadium.

Seven companies will participate in the drill today which will be held from 1 to 4:30 p. m.; tomorrow's drill, 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. and 2:30 p. m. to 4:30 p. m., will include participation by 11 companies.

Maj. Gen. Edward S. Bres, executive for Reserve and ROTC affairs, War Department, will be reviewing officer. Awards will be presented at 5:20 p. m. Friday.

Special guests of the Cadet Corps will be the surviving members of the First Uniformed Company, Washington High School Cadet Corps, divisions 10-13.

Chicago Woman And $2500 Saved After Dip in Sea

Genoa, June 4 (U.P.).—Miss Iolanto Mercedes Tessimi-Turi, of Chicago, was rescued by lifeboat after she plunged from the deck of the liner Saturnia 300 miles off Genoa, ship's officers said today. When saved, she was clutching a purse containing $2500, they added.

Steamship officials said they believed Miss Tessimi-Turi had worked for the American Army in Italy and went back to the United States to claim an inheritance. When the ship docked here she was met by a young Italian naval officer.

The officials asserted that Miss Tessimi-Turi jumped from the ship but gave no motive. They said she floated while the ship was stopped and a lifeboat lowered.

Weichel Gets Bradley Merchant Marine Post

By The Associated Press

Representative Weichel (R., Ohio) became chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee yesterday.

Acting on a recommendation of the Committee on Committees presented by Majority Leader Halleck (R., Ind.), the House elected the former Erie County, Ohio, prosecuting attorney to succeed the late Representative Bradley (R., Mich.).

Weichel is the first Ohioan to hold a major House committee chairmanship since 1930. He came to Congress only four years ago.

He is a 49-year-old bachelor.

Heavy Moscow Snow Held Omen Of Good Harvest

Moscow, June 4.—While Londoners were reported roasting in a heat wave, Muscovites were freezing today, as an arctic cold wave swept the capital and covered it with a heavy snowfall—a good omen for this year's harvest.

London, June 4 (U.P.).—Thunderstorms and high winds snapped Britain's six-day heat wave early today but failed to relieve an acute water shortage in many London districts.

Russia Strengthens Her Criminal Laws

London, June 4 (U.P.).—Russia tonight announced a drastic strengthening of its criminal laws in what was described as a "struggle against crimes."

Closely following the abolition of the death penalty in the decree, broadcast by the Moscow radio, prescribes that theft, appropriation, waste or other embezzlement of state property shall be punished by from 7 to 10 years confinement in Penal Camps. Second offenders and members of organized gangs are to face imprisonment for from 10 to 25 years, with confiscation of property.

5 Germans Sentenced For Killing 5 U. S. Fliers

Dachau, June 4 (AP).—Two German civilians were sentenced to death and three to prison terms by U. S. Military Courts today for the murder of five unarmed American fliers after their capture in wartime.

Max Bruno Gartmann, a former police official, was ordered hanged for having instructed a firing squad to execute one airman. Karl Eggert, who also received a death sentence, was convicted of participating in the shooting of four fliers in a slave labor camp.

British Monarchs to Receive 14 U. S. Women at Party

London, June 4 (AP).—American girls and their mothers will be presented at the Court of St. James's Tuesday for the first time since prewar days, but the ceremony will bear little resemblance to the pomp and ceremony of old.

Instead of the gilded halls of Buckingham Palace, the setting will be a royal garden party for some 6000 persons.

Instead of the trailing gowns—before the war the gowns could be no more than 18 inches from the heels—the girls may wear whatever they please.

Instead of the deep curtsy, those who are presented—the ladies, that is—will just make token curtsies.

To be exact, 14 American women will be presented to the King and Queen, apart from members of the American diplomatic force, their wives and children.

Being presented does not necessarily mean that everybody at the party meets the King or Queen. Merely presenting one's invitation at the gate counts as an official presentation. However, a certain number on the list are presented personally, and it is these who, if they are ladies, make their curtsies. The men merely bow.

The Americans invited to the party are:

Mrs. Harry L. Leeb, South Orange, N. J., and daugnter, Katrina; Mrs. Francis Miller of Philadelphia and daughter, Mary Coxe; Miss Ann Leigh Graham, stepdaughter of Stuart Pratt, vice president of the National City Bank of New York; Miss Letitia Baldridge of Omaha, Nebr., and Washington; Mrs. Cameron Clark and daughter, Rosalie, of New York; Miss Mareen Lawson-Johnston and Miss Denise Lawson-Johnston of New York; Mrs. Louise Stevens, Miss Mabel Rose, Mrs. Adele Vercoe (addresses unavailable), and Mrs. Gilbert Kennedy, American wife of a prominent London attorney.

In addition, nearly 100 "ladies and gentlemen of the embassy" are invited, beginning with Ambassador and Mrs. Lewis W. Douglas and their teen-age daughter, Sharman.

Stassen to Confer With Dewey Soon

By The Associated Press

Harold E. Stassen probably will meet with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey "within a day or two," an aide in Stassen's Washington headquarters said yesterday.

He told a reporter the former Minnesota Governor and the New York Chief Executive will meet in either Albany or New York.

Stassen, an announced candidate for the Presidency, is expected to tell Dewey of his recent European trip during which he met with Premier Stalin.

The Dewey visit is part of Stassen's previously announced plan to confer with Republican leaders.

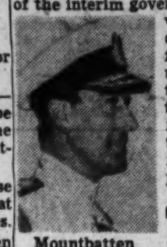
India's Interim Regime Agrees on Use of Armed Forces to Prevent Trouble During Transition

New Delhi, June 4 (AP).—Viceroy Lord Mountbatten told a news conference today that "all members" of the interim government of India were agreed India's armed forces should be used to the full to prevent disturbances during the transition from British rule to independence.



Mountbatten

Representatives of the Congress Party, Moslem League and Sikhs are in the cabinet.

Mountbatten repeatedly emphasized that Moslem India and Hindu India would be completely independent under the plan for transfer of power this summer, and that each would be completely free to walk out of the British Empire or remain as a dominion.

He also repeatedly declared that there was no provision in the plan for the princely states, which comprise almost half of India territorially, to be given separate dominion status. Any such proposition would have to be referred back to the British government in London, he said, adding that leaders of the major Indian parties were set against any provision which would permit the "Balkanization" of India.

The princely states receive their independence at the same time as the rest of India. Mountbatten said they would be free to join either Hindu India or Moslem India, and he believed each princely state would govern its decision largely on a geographical basis, although there was nothing to prevent a state in one part of India from joining the section in another part of the country.

His declaration that the princely states would not be welcomed into dominion status was an assurance greeted with relief by Nationalist Indians who have suspected that the British might try to keep military bases in India by separate agreements with at least some of India's potentates.

Mountbatten declared, however, that "I think it would be most improper for any foreign power to have bases in India."

Nation's Top Pros Try to Stop Locke Today; Feller Returns to Form, Defeats Nats, 6 to 2

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Blue Plate Special

LOCKE DEPT.—The American golf pros were hard put to repress a snicker when Bobby Locke, the South African, stepped to the practice tee the day before the Masters Tournament at Augusta, Ga., two months ago, Lew Worsham was telling the Touchdown Club yesterday.

POVICH

The first reaction of the Sneads, Hogans, Demarets and Worshams was to dismiss the invader as a glorified duffer, over his head in fast American company. "With that swing, Locke wasn't going far, we thought," related Worsham.

"There he was, doing everything in the old style that was dicarded a generation ago. He wasn't taking his club straight back like the good American pros. He had a loop at the start of his swing, and another at the top, and was rolling his wrists like any green pea.

"I played with him last week in the Goodall, just before he won it. It was Locke's fourth tournament win in the six he had played since coming to the United States. There wasn't an American pro who wasn't marveling at him by this time. In fact, I was watching some of our fellows on the practice tee, and there they were, actually trying to perfect Locke's roll of the wrists. I knew what they were thinking: 'If you can't beat 'em, join 'em'."

FIGHT DEPT.—Young Lew Hanbury, knocked flat four times in two rounds the other night by Herbie Jones at Griffith Stadium, is being retired by his manager, Al Weill, and none too soon. Hanbury was never any champion, but his fight career qualifies him for at least one superlative: he was probably the most mis-managed fighter of his time.

At 22, Hanbury is a washed-up old man of the prize ring after a series of mis-matches that blighted the career of a kid who liked to fight and had skill enough to take him far, with the proper handling. But Weill and Hanbury's doting dad, who seconded him in his fights, let the lad in for some cruel beatings long before he was ready for fast company.

They tossed him in with Henry Armstrong, and Sammy Angott, and Aaron Perry, and let him give away weight, and got him hurt badly. Against Jones the other night, he walked into some more brutal punches and was tipped over easily, in no state even to know what struck him after his second knockdown.

When they took him to his corner after 51 seconds of the second round, a ringsider yelled sympathetically, "Better hang 'em up, Lew." Hanbury heard him and then proved himself brighter than his handlers, with the comment, "You ain't kidding."

FELLER DEPT.—When they haul out that old saw about there ain't no sentiment in baseball, they're usually thinking in terms of the soulless corporations that fire ball players, cut salaries and send the mild miscreants packing off to the minors without a decent trial.

But it goes, too, for the fans who are the first to wail about the game's lack of sentiment. Out in Cleveland the other day, Bob Feller, pride of that city's fans for a decade, and in many seasons the only man of distinction on the Cleveland club, heard the wolf-cry of "Take him out!" for the first time in his life.

Cleveland fans are somewhat carniverous although there is no truth to the rumor that they eat their young, but toward Feller there had always been a kindly indulgence, even on those rare days when he took a bad beating. Last weekend, though, after the Yankees smacked him for four runs in four innings, he heard himself booed like the veriest bum.

It wasn't the friendly, kindly boo that the fans direct toward Joe DiMaggio and Ted Williams, merely because they are big shots. In Feller's case, it was the spiting, demanding boo because they wanted him out of there. The rub is that for Feller, or anybody else, there's no recourse, as long as they take money on the promise to win ball games.

STEPHENS DEPT.—At a time when Feller is failing to win consistently for the Indians, Manager Lou Boudreau is congratulating himself on the presence of one Bryan Stephens, who is qualifying as the slickest rookie pitcher to come along with the Cleveland club in several years.

The Indians brought Stephens up from the Pacific Coast League this year and Washington got an unpleasant glimpse of him a couple of weeks ago when, in his first big league start he licked the Nats, 9 to 1. A few days later he went back to relief pitching and beat the Yankees.

He's a 6-foot-4 right hander who wouldn't be pitching at all these days if he wasn't a right hander. While serving with the Army in Europe, he jumped off a GI truck and cleanly amputated the third finger of his left hand when his wedding ring caught on the side of the truck. He says his first reaction was one of happiness—that he wasn't a southpaw.

Spence Bats In Runs Off Fireballer

By Al Costello
Post Reporter

Cleveland, June 4.—Bob Feller ended his own personal pitching slump tonight, picking on the Nats to record a 6-2 victory for his Cleveland Indian teammates.

Rapid Robert, who had trouble in his last four starts, none of which he finished, checked in with his sixth triumph of the season against five losses with an eight-hit performance that included seven strikeouts. He was never in danger of defeat from his first pitch to the last.

Ray Scarborough, making his first start of the year, was bumped quite severely by the Tribe, surrendering six hits and four runs during the three and two-thirds innings he worked.

Milo Candini came on and, like Scarborough, was touched up freely. Luther Knerr and Scott Cary finally stilled the Indian bats but by that time the damage had been done.

Bob Some Hitter, Too

In only one inning—the sixth—did Feller falter and that was but for a moment when the Nats collected three straight hits for their two runs with Stan Spence supplying the base hit that drove both over the platter.

Not only was Feller doing a little bit of alright on the mound, but he was something of a slugger, too. He rammed out three hits—two doubles and a single and had a hand in each of the Tribe's three flurries good for two runs in the third, fourth and sixth innings.

Ken Keltner also whanged out three hits of the nine collected by the Tribe. Joe Grace, Mickey Vernon and Spence each cashed in with two safeties of the eight Feller dished out.

The Indians found the range in the third with a pair of tallies, helped along no little by Eddie Yost's wild throw. Feller connected for the first hit off Scarbonough, a double to left center.

Peck hit an easy grounder to Yost who threw over Vernon's head into right field, Feller scoring and Peck romping all the way to third. He scored when Keltner slashed a double over Lewis' head in right.

Seerey's seventh homer of the season, a line drive that cleared the synthetic fence and went into the lower left field stands, set off the Indians' two-run fourth inning that knocked Scarborough out of the box.

Feller followed with his second straight hit, a single to right. Peck lined a single to the same scetor, sending Feller to third. When Keltner sliced another single to the same place, scoring Rapid Robert, Scarborough went to an early shower and Candini was called in to stop things. He did by making Metkovich fly harmlessly to Lewis.

The Nats finally broke through Feller's armor in the sixth for two runs. Grace opened with a single. Vernon zipped a double down the third base line to chase Grace to third. Spence lined a single to center to score both but Priddy, Christman and Evans couldn't keep things going.

The Indians bounced right back in their half to get those two back. Feller rapped out his third straight hit, a double to right center, and completed the journey on Peck's one-baser to right.

Keltner's third straight hit was a rousing double to left which scored Peck and knocked Candini out of the box, just as his single in the fourth finished Scarborough. Knerr came in to get Metkovich and Boudreau.

Steve Gromek, Tribe pitcher, hurt his knee in pre-game practice and will be out for at least six weeks . . . Bill Veeck, jr., boss of the Indians who sits in the press box regularly, almost had his head taken off by a sizzling foul off the bat of Ken Keltner in the first inning but didn't blink an eye as the ball sped by only 2 or 3 feet from his noggin . . . The Indians are still hot and bothered about Stan Spence and would give almost anything they possess to have him in a Tribe uniform . . .

The Nats wind up their Cleveland stay tomorrow with an afternoon game at 2:30 p. m., Washington time. Early Wynn (4-4) goes for the Nats with Don Black (3-3) working for the home folks.

Reiser Bumps Head on Wall, Holds to Ball

Brooklyn, June 4 (AP).—Pistol Pete Reiser, the Dodgers' hard luck outfielder, struck his head against the center-field wall in tonight's game with the Pittsburgh Pirates while making a spectacular catch of a line drive and collapsed in a heap. He was carried off the field in a stretcher.

Reiser, who crashed concrete fences on several other occasions in his career, raced back this time for a drive off the bat of Wally Westlake.

He speared the ball in his gloved hand the moment his skull hit the wall, and while holding fast to the ball, crumpled on the spot.

It happened in the top half of the fifth inning with no one on base and the Dodgers leading, 7 to 2.

Dr. Dominic Rossi, the Dodgers' physician, said Reiser had sustained a V-shaped cut on the top of his head and appeared not seriously injured. He said there was no sign of a fracture and that X-ray pictures will be taken tomorrow morning.

STAGE IS ALL SET—This was the scene at the Prince Georges Country Club yesterday as big-name golf professionals warmed up for the start of the $10,000 National Capital Open Tournament today. At the top, George Schoux (extreme right) tees off with Jimmy Thomson (left), one of the game's longest hitters, and Ellsworth Vines, former tennis great, looking on. Lower, Bobby Locke, sensational South African, hits a few shots to the "oohs" and "ahs" of spectators

125 Play In $10,000 Capital Open

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

"Stop Locke" will be the byword at the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club this morning when 125 topflight pros and amateurs tee off in the $10,000 National Capital Open.

This will be the last chance the touring American shotmakers have to put the brakes on the South African sensation before the National Open tourney next week in St. Louis. The benickered invader has already been established as a top choice in the national.

Fresh from his triumph in the recent Goodall invitation and the open qualifying rounds, Bobby Locke arrived yesterday, participated in a 12-man clinic at Prince Georges and then played nine holes. A crowd estimated at over 1800 watched him in the clinic and then trailed him as he played the back side with Clayton Heafner and George Fazio.

It Winds Up Sunday

Locke is favored to capture top money of $2000 when the 72-hole test winds up Sunday evening, but his path won't be easy.

The course is in fine shape and early arrivals among the star-spangled field haven't found it too difficult. Sammy Snead, hitting the ball well for a change, added a 2-under-par 70 in his final tuneup yesterday. Snead has played the course three times in practice sessions and has whipped par anywhere from two to six strokes.

Best guess is that a 72-hole total of 280 or under will be required to win top money. Although the course is long—6778 yards—it is not too tough and the par busters are expected to do just that on their four trips around the county layout.

With the exception of PGA Champion Ben Hogan, the field lists the best in the pro brigade. Expected to push Locke for first money are Sneed, British Open champion, and Lloyd Mangrum, the "Purple Heart" kid who defends his National Open crown in St. Louis next week.

There'll be stiff competition, too, from Jim Ferrier, Cary Middlecoff, Elly Vines, Washington's own Lew Worsham and a dark-horse player in the person of young George Payton, the 23-year-old Virginia Open champion, who had a fine 69 on his first tour of the course.

Home Pro Al Houghton starts the ball rolling at 9:30 this morning. From then until 2:03, when Herman Barron, winner of the rich Tam O'Shanter tourney last summer, tees off, the field goes off in threesomes.

Locke goes to the post at 1:42. He'll be playing with Lawson Little, one-time open and amateur king, and Fazio.

Play will be 18 holes daily, with the 60 low pros and 10 low amateurs qualifying for the final 18 holes on Saturday and Sunday.

Locke was warmly praised by three of his fellow golfing travelers who spoke at the Touchdown Club yesterday noon.

Al Houghton, Prince Georges Club pro who organized the $10,000 Capital Open, was master of ceremonies and introduced E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, Little Rock, Ark.; Fred Haas, rising youngster from New Orleans, and Washington's own Lew Worsham.

Haas, who stopped Byron Nelson's winning tournament string at 12 in a row in the Memphis Open a couple of years back, said that Locke won 10 of 12 tournaments in Great Britain last year, and has taken four of six in this country.

"I played with Locke in the Texas Open, and he actually missed victory there because of a bead of sweat on his driving hand that misdirected one of his shots," Haas said. "The fellow will appear in six more major tournaments in this country, and has a good chance of sweeping them all."

Macks Get 7 in 11th to Rout Chisox

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—The Philadelphia Atheletics pushed over seven runs during a wild eleventh inning today to hand the Chicago White Sox a 10-3 pasting.

It was the third time the A's bounced back during the game after overcoming 1-0 and 3-1 Chicago leads before breaking a 3-3 deadlock established in the eighth inning.

Bosox, 5; Browns, 2

St. Louis, June 4 (AP).—Home runs by Ted Williams and Sabath Mele, the latter with a man on base, gave the Boston Red Sox the margin of victory over St. Louis in a twilight game tonight, beating the Browns, 5 to 2, to split a 2-game series. It was Williams' twelfth circuit blow of the season.

Walt Judnich tied up the game in the fifth inning with his fourth home run of the year with no one on base, but Williams came back in the top half of the sixth to put the Red Sox ahead again.

Federal Storage Trips Del Ray Boys, 7-6

A two-run rally in the sixth inning gave Federal Storage Co. a 7-6 victory over Del Ray yesterday in a Boys Club of Washington, Georgetown Branch, Insect League game at Western High.

The defeat dropped Del Ray back into a tie for first place with idle May Hardware. The winning runs came across on singles by Mole Janigan, and Ed Claxton, and a double by Carl King.

DiMaggio's Hit Streak Ends As Tigers, Yankees Split Pair

Detroit, June 4 (AP).—The New York Yankees unloosed their siege guns to gain an even break today in a wild double header with the league-leading Detroit Tigers, who stayed two games in front by winning the opener, 6 to 2, although the Yanks staged their sluggingest game of the season to take the nightcap, 17 to 8.

The 17 runs in the second game equaled New York's scoring high for the year and the Yanks hit new tops in two departments by clubbing five Detroit pitchers for 18 hits and 33 total bases in the nightcap.

Included in the Yankee assault that netted one six-run outburst and two four-run sprees in the second game were homers by Pinchhitter Frank Colman, Bill Johnson and Aaron Robinson, a triple by Tom Henrich, four doubles and 10 singles.

Trout Ends Joe's String

Robinson also homered in the first game and so did Henrich. Johnson drove in six runs with two hits in the nightcap and Phil (Scooter) Rizzuto collected seven hits in 10 times at bat in the two games.

Joe DiMaggio's 16-game hitting streak was snapped by Dizzy Trout in the opener but DiMaggio got two hits in six times up in the second game to come out of the twin bill with a batting average of .357 for the season.

The Tigers scored five times in the first two innings of the opener to pin the defeat on Starter Floyd Bevens as Trout scattered nine hits to take his sixth victory.

Benton Can't Hold Lead

Detroit jumped on Don Johnson for four runs in the opening frame of the nightcap but big Al Benton couldn't hold onto the lead in the face of the Yankee barrage and took his first defeat after three wins. Joe Page, third New York pitcher, gained credit for the triumph.

Detroit Third Baseman George Kell was spiked by George Stirnweiss in the first game and went to the hospital for treatment of a cut left knee and a torn forefinger on his right hand. Dick Wakefield twisted his ankle sliding into second base and both he and Kell are expected to be out of the lineup for three or four days.

Fred Burton, who is racing secretary here, has been named in the same capacity for the Marlboro meeting this year. Joseph Farrell, president of that track, made the announcement through Edward O'Hara who is here as State representative of the Racing Commission in the mutual department. The session Marlboro goes 10 days, September 13 to 24. Apprentice E. Hopkins who started his career here the other day is an excellent prospect. He didn't win with Wrack Fair in today's fourth race but he sold himself to me. All he needs is a chance. I received word that Morris M. Klopp, who was arrested at Havre de Grace meeting for passing bogus $10 tickets was tried at Bel Air and found guilty by jury. His three-year jail sentence was suspeneded on payment of a $1000 and costs fine. The case was prosecuted by the tote company and track. Pandoramint, who started here today, is 12 years old and makes her way each season. The ancient gal won 2 of 26 starts last year and doubtless will pick up purse money at this meeting. Jockey Leon Garrett who is no youngster, is her regular rider. Jockey Julius Hamilton is here and looking for mounts. Like Webb Snyder, Johnny Tammaro and others, Hamilton is staging a comeback after breaking a leg. See you on the rail. BILL.

Dr. Johnson Winner by 4 Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 4. Two veterans of many turf battles combined today to win the Walton Schultze purse, featuring the Wednesday program here. J. K. Wynkoop's Dr. Johnson, a 7-year-old horse, and Jockey Sammy Palumbo, who must be getting close to 37, teamed to score by four lengths in the test of 6 furlongs and 120 feet.

H. W. Shaffer's Woodscott was second in the sprint. Three additional lengths back came Martin and Early's Spikery to be third in a field of eight.

The track was fast as it ever will be and the weather could not have been better had the day been ordered out of the Hagerstown Almanac. Dr. Johnson, a non-winner last year and second in his first start here, was clocked in 1:16 1/5 and paid a $5.40 mutuel as the favorite.

Palumbo got the son of Boswell off alertly, taking him to the front where he was to stay. Corley's Pet and Spikery tried to dislodge him early and failed.

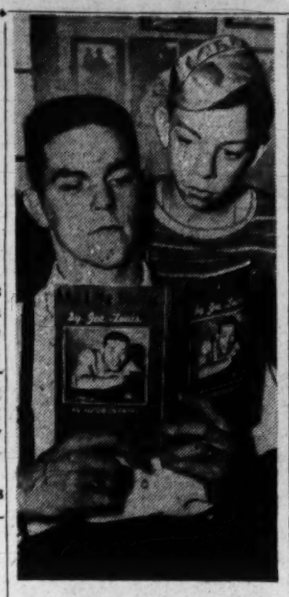
In the final drive, Woodscott came from far back and made a bid. However, Palumbo never took victory for granted and was putting up a hard hand ride at the end.

The day's closest finish came in the seventh race, the Harold Willey purse. J. H. Morris' No Quota was the winner by a neck in the three-way photo that also involved Mrs. A. White's Nobby and Mrs. C. P. Chenoweth's Phoness. The winner, ridden by Jockey Benny Leggett of Washington, paid $6.40 and stepped the Charles Town course in 1:17 4/5.

Apprentice Jimmy Baird and W. R. Roberts' Irish Rogue escaped injury in a spectacular spill at the far turn. The 3-year-old went down in a cloud of dust, but both horse and rider arose much to the amazement of the crowd.

Maiden of 12 Also a Winner

Charles Town, W. Va., June 4. A 12-year-old maiden finally reached the winner's circle here today. Tristernagh won the eighth race by a length margin and paid an across-the-board mutuel of $93.20, $31.20 and $12.80. Jockey Lawrence Eversole did the riding. The ancient steed was bred in England and is owned by J. R. Bringhurst of Charles Town.



AN INSPIRATION—Joe Gannon, local middleweight who boxes Ken Stribling next Monday night at Griffith Stadium, derives some inspiration from reading "My Life Story," by Joe Louis, a book he purchased from 13-year-old Robert Suit as part of a campaign by the Junior Police and Citizens' Corps to raise $25,000

Gannon May Get Bee Bee Fight

Joe Gannon, 20-year-old local middleweight, will meet Bee Bee Washington on July 7, if he defeats Ken Stribling in their ten-round match next Monday night at Griffith Stadium.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez also made it known that his plans for Gannon include a bout with Smuggy Hursey either July 21 or early in August, provided the former National AAU titleholder, who has lost but 1 of 57 matches as an amateur and pro, hurdles Stribling and Washington.

Cubs Blank Giants, 6 to 0, to Regain Tie for Lead

Ottmen Get Only 4 Hits Off Borowy

New York, June 4 (AP).—Curve-Ball Specialist Hank Borowy pitched the Chicago Cubs back into a tie for the National League lead with the New York Giants today by shutting out Manager Mel Ott's crew, 6-0, on four hits.

Borowy, in his best game of the season so far, faced only 31 batters and was working on a no-hitter until Willard Marshall broke the spell by singling with one down in the fifth.

Bill Nicholson slammed his seventh homer in the sixth off Gene Thomson, who relieved Starter Monty Kennedy, and the Cubs garnered their last run in the eighth off Bill Voiselle, third of four Giant tossers.

Phillies, 9; Reds, 2

Philadelphia, June 4 (AP).—Ker Heintzelman made the first start of his career against the Cincinnati Reds today and aided by a 12-hit attack on three Red pitchers hurled the Philadelphia Phillies to a 9-2 triumph before 3810. It was the Phils' sixth victory in seven starts against the Ohioans.

The Phillies took a 2-0 lead in the first when Harry Walker doubled and scored on Andy Seminick's triple. Seminick crossed the plate on Benny Zientara's poor throw. Cincinnati picked up a run in the second on Bert Haas' triple and Grady Hatton's fly. The Phils added three more in the fifth to go in front 5-1.

Boston Homers Beat Cards, 3-1

Boston, June 4 (AP).—On the strength of successive sixth inning home runs by Nanny Fernandez and Danny Litwhiler, the Boston Braves tonight defeated the St. Louis Cardinals, 3-1, behind Charlie (Red) Barrett who was making his first start against his former teammates. A paid crowd of 29,425 saw Stan Musial make a diving catch of a hot, low line drive in the ninth inning to rob Earl Torgeson of a hit. Torgy had hit in 15 successive games.

AAU Boxing Awards Made

Winners and runners-up in the District of Columbia AAU's 1947 boxing championships received awards last night at a buffet supper held at the Jewish Community Center. To all senior champions went gold belts, emblematic of District titles, while novice winners and runners-up in both divisions were rewarded with medals.

Pete Cilinski of St. Mary's Club, senior lightweight titlist, was presented with a watch by the District Boxing Commission in recognition of his selection as the outstanding senior in the tourney. Clubmate Dickie Rawlett, 112-pound novice winner, was rewarded with the Touchdown Club watch as the outstanding novice boxer.

Marine Hugh Smyth, Quantico's 160-pound novice king, was awarded a trophy by the AAU for being selected as the runner-up novice standout, and to Charley Carhart, Washington Boys' Club lightweight, went the Hartley Trophy as the tournament's outstanding performer. The District of Columbia AAU senior team trophy was awarded to St. Mary's Club of Alexandria, and the Quantico Marines received the novice team award.

Three Horse Shows on Sunday

Horse enthusiasts have a varied agenda next Sunday. Starting at 10 a. m. (DST), the Washington Bridle Trails Association's tenth annual Gymkhana will take place at the Equitation Field in Rock Creek Park. Five hilarious events are on the card and sedate horsemen will be seen carrying golf balls in spoons, popping balloons, blowing whistles, bouncing rubber balls and scrambling for seats in the musical chairs event, all this while mounted.

The Animal Welfare League of Arlington, Va., will hold its third annual horse show at the Portner Estate, Manassas, Va., starting at 12 noon (EST), Sunday. The show is licensed by the Virginia Horse Shows Association. Thirteen classes make up the well-balanced program and prizes are the most lucrative offered this season.

Seven classes are devoted to green and qualified hunters and four to jumpers, championships and reserves will be awarded in each division. Judges for the event are Jack Prestage, Boyce, Va., and J. North Fletcher, Warrenton, Va. Kemp B. Furr is chairman and Evelyn W. Robert is vice chairman.

The popular St. Margaret's Horse Show, licensed by the Association of Maryland Horse Shows, Sunday starts at 12:30 p. m. (DST) at the Edgar Vermillion Estate, formerly the St. Margaret's Hunt Club, near Annapolis, Md. Seventeen classes for hunters, jumpers and hacks are listed. Two classes are limited to southern Maryland entries. Claude W. Owen, District of Columbia, and George Edel, McDonough, Md., are the judges. George W. Norris is chairman of the show.

Drop in and get acquainted with your Nash 10 Point Select Dealer. You'll agree with us they are fine people who do fine work.

THESE 10 POINTS OF ACHIEVEMENT MEAN YOU'LL ENJOY THE FINEST SERVICE AVAILABLE ANYWHERE

1. CAPITAL—Strong financial standing is proof that this outstanding dealership is a sound business organization—ready to meet your automotive requirements today and in the tomorrows to come.
2. FLOOR SPACE—You'll find adequate floor space for your comfort in all departments—new cars, used cars, service, parts and accessories.
3. LOCATION—Located for your convenience . . . easily accessible from all sections of the city.
4. IDENTIFICATION—The approved Nash sign identifies this dealership as the home of fine cars and friendly service. Look for the distinctive Nash sign.
5. APPEARANCE—From the very first glance you'll like the looks of this progressive dealership. It's light, clean, attractive—a place you'll be happy to visit.
6. SERVICE—Bring your car in for any service you need. Here are factory-trained mechanics, modern tools and equipment to provide fast, thorough work on everything from a minor adjustment to a major overhaul on any make car.
7. PARTS—This is your parts headquarters. Complete stocks of factory-built and factory-approved parts and accessories are carried for all Nash models.
8. NEW CAR SHOWROOM—Examine the new Nash "600" and the new Nash Ambassador in the spacious showroom. It's large enough to avoid overcrowding . . . especially designed to permit you to examine these fine cars from every angle.
9. USED CAR DISPLAY FACILITIES—You'll likely find the used car you want at this Nash dealer . . . a good, clean car that will give you many miles of driving pleasure. And you can look it over in comfort in the attractive used car department.
10. ACCOUNTING—All business transactions are properly recorded in the Nash Standard Accounting System. This means not only that the Accounting Department is modern and well organized, but that all transactions with customers will be handled in a businesslike way.

American ORIGINALS

Seagram's Ancient Bottle Gin, an American Original, first basic gin improvement in over 300 years!

Wooden Indian, an American Original, traditional symbol of the tobacconist.

You've never tasted gin like this. So different in its natural color of vintage champagne; in its mellow body. With a flavor all its own.
Discover Seagram's Ancient Bottle Gin, result of Seagram's leisurely, time-honored method—original, exclusive, natural.
Let that distinctive color guide you to the perfect cooling Collins. You can spot it quickly among the colorless gins.

Calvary Club To Play 'The Bat'

"The Bat," Avery Hopwood's and Mary Roberts Rinehart's celebrated mystery play, will be offered by the Calvary Dramatic Club in Guild Hall, 1463 Columbia rd. nw., Thursday and Friday nights at 8 o'clock.

The mystery-comedy is one of the most successful of its kind in American theater history. The authors adapted it from Mrs. Rinehart's equally popular book, "The Circular Staircase."

The company is being directed by Dr. Frances Roberds.

Kingsley Story to Be Film

By Hedda Hopper

Hollywood.—Metro has bought Sidney Kingsley's original story, "A Walk to the Corner." It deals with a veteran who, because of the bitterness of his experiences during and after the war, has lost all faith in God and man. During a walk to a street corner, however, he sees so many incidents of kindness that he regains confidence, hope, and new ability to pursue happiness . . . Jessica Tandy gets her big opportunity in "The Mortal Coil." Her part in that picture is as good as Charles Boyer's . . . Greer Garson actually fought for the role of Lady Macbeth in the filmization of the Shakespeare play that is to have Orson Welles as director and star. Greer may be starred in "Return to Night," the story of a woman who finds herself unhappily married to a man younger than herself. No comment . . . Orson Welles, incidentally, is living in a beach house built by Marion Davies. It is now owned by Charlie Lederer, who is married to Orson's first wife. She's the mother of Welles' first daughter.

Greer Garson

Gentleman's Agreement

Phyllis Calvert returns from London June 13, for her first Paramount picture. When I was in London last year, I met Phyllis, Deborah Kerr, James Mason, Carol Reed, who directed "Odd Man Out," and Compton Bennett, who directed "The Seventh Veil." At that time they were all under a "Gentleman's agreement" contract to J. Arthur Rank. The deals had been closed with a handshake . . . Since then they all have been in America. Deborah has signed with Metro; Phyllis Calvert and Compton Bennett, with Paramount. James Mason is free lancing; likewise Carol Reed. There are many fine actors and directors in London with whom Rank can replace the above people. But I'll wager that from now on, his stars will be required to sign contracts. In one sense, you can't blame them for making the deals most profitable to themselves, but you can censure them for disloyalty to those who gave them opportunities.

Done on Short Notice

You never would have guessed that Cedric Hardwicke stepped into "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" just two days before the play opened here. He was perfect as the sadistic father. Had I known that Guthrie McClintic was playing the part in San Francisco, I'd have flown up for it. Guthrie, who can be horrible when his actors give less than perfect performances, should have had some past members of his casts present to watch him emote . . . Vera Vague will do the play "Biography" at the summer theater in Deer Lake, Pa. She couldn't be more unlike Ina Claire, who once starred in the same play . . . Ralph Byrd, the screen's Dick Tracy, and a relative of Admiral Byrd, has finished a mighty successful personal appearance tour with his latest picture, "Dick Tracy's Dilemma." While Ralph was at war, the Tracy role was played by another fellow. But fans wanted Byrd back.

Big Top Is a Backdrop For Careers as Varied As Mammals and Molars

By Richard L. Coe

SPEAKING OF THE CIRCUS—and a lot of people are—did you know that:

The Zoo's Dr. Mann applied for a job as an animal trainer with Ringling Brothers when a young man? . . . And young William didn't get the job.

Joe E. Brown was a circus man, but not a clown? . . . The screen comedian was an acrobat.

Little Annie Sheridan applied for a circus job but wasn't accepted? . . . Too young, they said . . . She was 10 . . . Ann made up for it last year in Chicago when she rode an elephant and kept on tour for a full week in clown makeup.

Bobby Clark, the musical comedy comic, ran AWAY from the circus? . . . He and his partner, the late Paul McCullough, were clowns with the Ringling show—and good ones—but they wanted less travel.

Only 10 years ago Red Skelton was with the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus? . . . The doughnut-dunking act had its beginning under the Big Top.

Wallace Beery was an "elephant shepherd" with Ringling? . . . And he got $12.50 a week for his toe-daring.

And Dr. Sterling G. Mead, the Washington dentist, former president of the American Dental Society, was a member of the American Belfords, the juggling act? . . . And what do you think of that, you uneasy folk in a 16th st. waiting room?

CIRCULATION WANTED: We saw a short film yesterday at the National Archives whose value will lie in getting it shown to primitive people around the globe . . . It's called "Give Us the Earth," an M-G-M film produced in cooperation with the Associated Press . . . The hero is Dr. Spencer Hatch, rehabilitation expert of the YMCA and United Nations consultant . . . The film shows his work in Mexico, teaching the natives how scientific farming can bring depleted land back to productivity . . . It's of interest to American city-dwellers chiefly as proof of what such organizations as the international YMCA can do . . . But to primitive peoples, not only in the Americas but in such land-poor spots as the Middle East and India, it could mean much . . . Since M-G-M is releasing it in 15 languages for world distribution, its purpose may be achieved . . . Sir John Orr, director of the Food and Agriculture Organization, and other FAO officials were in the audience . . . And Metro should be proud to know sharp-eyed, kindly Sir John was impressed.

MORE FACTS: Speaking of factual films, the Alexandria Community Center is offering the first in a new series Friday night . . . Director Eugene L. Barnwell has programmed five subjects under the general title, "This Is America," including the OWI's short on the Library of Congress; "Teamwork," a reportage on a World War II Negro battalion; and "Luckiest People on Earth," wherein the editors of "Look" picture the U. S. A.

PEOPLE OF DISTINCTION: Is a beautiful Washington columnist too shy to bring it up or hasn't she seen Joseph Cotton in "The Farmer's Daughter?" . . . Anyhoo, Joe's playing a Congressman of great charm in the Metropolitan's political comedy . . . And its locale is unmistakably Minnesota . . . A gal we know says Joe's more fascinatin' than any member of Congress she knows . . . But we can't help thinking the guy looks a lot like a real Minnesota native, now serving as a United States Senator from Washington . . . A very attractive guy indeed . . . And we wish the veiled lady would see "The Farmer's Daughter" if only to agree with us . . . We trust we're not being too cryptic!

MORE PEOPLE: The Neil Hamilton company of "State of the Union" has now taken over New York's Hudson Theater, the same cast which played the comedy at the National a few months ago . . . And two thirds of our "Voice of the Turtle" company of last summer has also taken over the New York assignment—Louisa Horton and Peggy French are at the Morosco. Boyd Crawford replaces Harvey Stephens as the vacationing sergeant . . . And remember Jo Lombardi, who used to conduct the orchestra at the Earle for years and years? . . . Joe's the new musical director of Baltimore's Hippodrome . . . Good luck in the new job, Joe.

WEDDING BELLS: Catholic University's drama department produces romance as well as plays . . . Scenic designer-lighting expert Ruth Shmigelsky will be married this morning at St. Anthony's Church to John McGiver, who's scored several hits as an actor during the past year . . . He's also the author of the first play in the university's playwriting festival, "All Gaul Is Divided," which opens its three-week run Sunday the 22d . . . A busy June indeed for the McGivers.

The Theater Guild may embark upon a television venture with NBC . . . Last year the members of the Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry on Palestine were disturbed at hearing swing music on the Sea of Galilee. Dr. James G. McDonald, who has just returned from a second visit to Palestine, where he helped break ground for the new Hebrew University and Hadassah Medical School, says: "It is hardly a source of gratification to the committee that its recommendation on swing is the only one that has been put into effect."

John Steinbeck will be discharged from Lenox Hill Hospital today. He'll be on crutches for a while, until his fractured knee is completely mended . . . Dr. W. A. S. Rosenbach, the rare book and manuscript collector, was asked by a man who wanted to invest in these items: "Could you give me one safe rule to go by, in making a collection?" Dr. Rosenbach thought a while and then replied: "I think we could safely say that any book published before 1500 is worth at least five dollars."

On the bulletin board of the Riviera Country Club, where the movie stars and executives play, is posted the score made by Jesse Lasky, the producer, on holes Nos. 15, 16 and 17. Gene Kelly Set For Fairbanks' 'Musketeer'

By Louella O. Parsons

Hollywood (INS).—If anybody could be as active and agile as Douglas Fairbanks was in "The Three Musketeers" it is Gene Kelly.

Gene Kelly

And Gene it is for this remake of Dumas' undying classic of the three swordsmen whose motto was "one for all, and all for one." Pan Berman is putting it into production at M. G. M. in September.

Sol Lesser is combining "Kidnapped," and its sequel, "David Balfour," the Robert Louis Stevenson stories, and costarring Aileen Roberts and Lon McCallister.

James Mason says my item that his first Hollywood movie would be with Bette Davis was premature.

"I said I'd like to read the script—but it hasn't been sent on yet," he writes.

Ray Milland, in a cable from England, says he has seen almost as much of London on this visit as he did in all the years he lived there:

"We've been on location in Regents Park, Hyde Park, Lincoln's Inn Fields, Sheyne Row in Chelsea and Denham on my picture, 'So Evil My Love.'

"Have found a wonderful flat in Grosvenor Square for Mal, the youngster and myself and am getting it ready for their arrival in about two weeks. Fish and chips here just as good as ever."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Growing White House Concern Reported Over Housing Shortage

By Drew Pearson

WHITE HOUSE friends say that President Truman is getting more and more concerned over the housing shortage and the failure of either private industry or the Government to do much about it.

Whether Truman now realizes his mistake in letting his own Administration officials cut the ground out from under former housing czar Wilson Wyatt remains to be seen. However, it is a fact that not only Congress, but also Truman's own housing expediters have bogged down on housing.

Here is an example of how they have bogged right in Truman's home bailiwick—Kansas City:

The other day Dutch Miller, promoter of the midget-car races at Olympic Stadium, Kansas City, wanted to enlarge the seating space for his spectators. In hot weather, he said, they had to sit too close together. So he proposed $8,500 worth of new construction.

However, the Kansas City Citizens Committee, appointed to protect the veterans' housing program, said no. They ruled first that midget-car races weren't necessary to the life of Kansas City, and second, that it wouldn't hurt the spectators to sit a little closer together, anyway.

Whereupon Dutch Miller went over the heads of the Kansas City Veterans' Housing Committee and took his case direct to the Office of Housing Expediter in Washington. And, much to the surprise of the local people, he won. William E. O'Brien, deputy housing expediter, wired his official permission to build bigger and better seating arrangements for those who wanted to view the midget-car races in Kansas City.

Theaters Vs. Veterans

QUESTIONED by this column as to why he overruled the Kansas City committee, Deputy Housing Expediter O'Brien explained that only a small amount of building was involved. However, what he forgot was the sock-on-the-jaw he gave to the morale of the folks in Kansas City. The starch was taken right out of them regarding veterans' housing.

However Harry Truman appointed O'Brien and Frank Creedon to run the Office of Housing Expediter, he should have known what he was doing. For Creedon's previous record in yielding to private interests as against veterans' interests was readily available to the White House. Time after time, as a member of the Civilian Production Administration, Creedon had overruled Wilson Wyatt when it came to veterans' housing.

Creedon

Here are some of the cases where Creedon ruled in favor of reconditioning or remodeling amusement places and against veterans' housing:

Knickerbocker Burlesque Theater, Columbus, Ohio; Griffith Theaters, Carlsbad, N. Mex.; A. Afalu and Sons Theater, Leland, Miss.; Paul Neale Outdoor Theater, Lexington, Ky.; Constantine Vasela Theater, Nogales, Ariz.; Edward S. Nolan Theater, Eclectic, Ala.; N. H. Sparks Theater, Thompkinsville, Ky.; Robin Adair Theater, Atlanta, Ga.; Charles R. Jones' restaurant, bar and liquor store, San Diego, Calif.; Frank Nunzi and Tony Mangier night club, Galesburg, Ill.; Princeton, Ind., Theater.

Many of these involved only small amounts of money. But taken in the aggregate they have a definite impact on veterans' housing. Most important impact, however, is on the morale of local citizens committees, such as in Kansas City, when they are overruled by the Office of Housing Expediter in Washington.

Steel Quota Increase Seen For Germany

Berlin, June 4 (AP).—Informed sources indicated today Britain and the United States probably would agree to allow Western Germany to produce about 12 million tons of steel a year for "domestic use."

This, if agreed on, would be one half of Germany's prewar total, but more than twice the 5,800,000 quota for all of Germany set last year by the Four-power Allied Control Council.

Meanwhile, the Minister of Economics in the Berlin municipal government, said Russia was taking 90 per cent of all industrial production in her occupation zone and had demanded delivery of 2 million tons of scrap iron and steel from the zone and her sector of Berlin.

The minister, Gustav Klingelhoefer, said the book value of plants dismantled for reparations by the Russians in the Russian zone amounted to 10 billion marks. He claimed this alone would represent 40 per cent of the 10 billion dollars the Russians have demanded in reparations.

An American memorandum today accused the Russians in the Allied Kommandatur of violating a four-power agreement for feeding Berlin by favoring residents in the Soviet section of the city.

United States representatives said they considered the Russian violations "technical, but recurrent. These involved mainly holiday bonuses of sugar. Better fish and meat rations also were provided in the Russian sector.

Iran Troops Dispatched Against Barzani Rebels

Teheran, June 4 (AP).—Iranian government forces have been sent into northern Kurdistan to fight 500 Barzani rebels headed by Mulla Mustafa, Iraqi Kurdish chieftain, who has reentered Iran from Turkey, it was officially announced today.

Wheeler Quits As Counsel

Former Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana resigned yesterday as special counsel for the Senate War Investigating Committee.

He was named several weeks ago to handle an investigation of Government purchases of oil from the Arabian Gulf area.

President Truman vetoed the original resolution authorizing his appointment on the ground that the authority granted him was too broad. A new resolution was passed to meet the President's objections, but Mr. Truman has not signed it.

An announcement by the committee said Wheeler gave as his reason for resigning "his inability from now on to devote as much time to the work assigned to him as would be necessary to produce the maximum result."

Wheeler resigned, the statement said, in a letter to Chairman Brewster (R., Me.) which was postmarked Montevideo, Uruguay, one of the South American cities Wheeler is visiting on a business tour.

Soviet, China Both Protest Hostile Press

Nanking, June 4 (U.P.)—Russia and China today exchanged notes protesting against "hostile press reports" directed against each other, a foreign office spokesman announced.

Russian Ambassador Apallon Petrov was said to have complained to the foreign office that "reactionary campaigns" against the Soviet Union were being spearheaded by two newspapers in Shanghai and Tientsin published by Czarist elements.

The Chinese spokesman said the foreign office promised to investigate the charges, but pointed out that newspapers, magazines and news agencies in Russia have attacked Chinese administration consistently during recent months.

He said the foreign office had made "many" written protests to the Soviet government, requesting action to "correct" news stories supporting organizations trying to overthrow the Chinese government by force.

Meanwhile, Information Director Hollington Tong said the Government forstalled a "dangerous Communist plot" when it raided universities and newspaper offices Monday and arrested scores of students, editors and reporters.

Tong said, "patriotic" students tipped off Government agents to the alleged Communist plot, but gave no further details.

On the fighting front, government military dispatches claimed that the Comunist offensive against the Manchurian capital of Changchun had bogged down and indicated Chinese Nationalist troops were preparing counterattacks to reopen the Changchun-Mukden railway.

The semiofficial Central News agency said Communist attacks were slowing down in Jehol Province. It said victories in the Changchun area would enable government forces to counterattack at Kungchuling (Princess Ridge), 35 miles southwest of Changchun-Mukden line. The Communists captured Kungchuling two weeks ago.

Andrews to Push California Site For Navy School

By The Associated Press

Chairman Andrews (R., N. Y) of the House Armed Services Committee advised Representative Anderson (R., Calif.) yesterday that he will seek a rule today or tomorrow for House consideration of the bill to establish a naval postgraduate school at Monterey, Calif.

Anderson is author of the bill which would authorize an expenditure of $2,500,000 to purchase the Del Monte Hotel and other property adjoining Monterey and equip a school for 500 line officers.

Granting of the rule would clear the way for House debate of the measure possibly next week.

The Navy has urged early approval of the Monterey legislation to take advantage of its option to buy the Del Monte Hotel property which will expire unless the bill passes both House and Senate before adjournment of Congress late in July.

A bill granting the Navy legal authority to establish a postgraduate school, independent of the Annapolis Naval Academy, passed the House Monday by unanimous consent. That legislation, however, did not fix the site or authorize funds for the school.

Senate Unit Votes To Boost Stipend Of GI Students

By The Associated Press

Legislation to increase living allowances for veterans attending college under the GI Bill of Rights was approved yesterday by a Senate Public Welfare Subcommittee.

It also voted to increase from $175 to $200 monthly the amount of pay veterans taking on-the-job training may earn and still qualify for Federal aid. The ceiling for married men would be $250. It approved raising the subsistence allowance of veterans attending college from $65 a month to $75 for single veterans; from $90 to $105 a month for married veterans with no children, and from $90 to $120 a month to those who are married and have children.

Nagasaki Bomb Changed Onions, Not Humans—Yet!

Tokyo, June 4 (A.P.).—Dr. Masao Tsuzuki of Tokyo University says some plants have developed freaks at atom-bombed Nagasaki, but he still isn't sure whether humans will, too.

After studying damage at Nagasaki, he said he did not think any freaks would be born to survivor-parents "immediately."

Tsuzuki said Nagasaki onions and pumpkins have shown a great change as the result of exposure to the atom bomb.

Dental Exams Free For Camp Children

The second-period campers will be examined later this month, John Crawley, secretary of the Summer Outings Committee of the Family Service Association, announced.

P-TA Lauded On 'Pioneer' Cooperation

Chicago, June 4 (A.P.).—Herold C. Hunt, superintendent of schools at Kansas City, Mo., said today the current parent-teacher movement was merely a widespread application of the cooperative principle on which "frontier schools" operated.

Hunt, who today accepted the superintendency of the Chicago public school system, told the National Congress of Parents and Teachers that in the frontier days, "parent-teacher activity, although it was not called by that name, was largely responsible for the recognition of the value of the educational program that was then offered.

"In that era when the school teacher boarded at the home of one of the school patrons," he said, "the two fundamentals of parent-teacher activity, interpretation and participation, were effectively established."

Pearl A. Wanamaker, president of the National Education Association, said that "meager salaries and embarrassing social restrictions are the chief factors which continue to deteriorate our public schools.

"One imperative and comprehensive need is that of finding and retaining superior teachers," Mrs. Wanamaker told the congress.

Mrs. Wanamaker, who is superintendent of public instruction for Washington State, said that despite the increase provided for next year the "greater majority of our teachers still earn less than unskilled laborers."

French Rail Strike Lasts Two Hours

Paris, June 4 (U.P.).—Fifteen hundred railroad workers at the important Lyon Terminal struck for two hours today in a demand for higher wages, paralyzing transportation to southeastern France.

They returned to their jobs early tonight at the request of union leaders, but it was feared they might walk out again unless their demands were met.

Lyon local union officials had threatened to stop all traffic in and around Paris.

National Railroad Federation officials were to meet with Transport Minister Jules Moch tomorrow. Union leaders said there was a possibility of a country-wide rail strike unless Moch met their demands.

A big rail strike would be especially grave because there was no sign of an early end to the gasoline workers' strike.

Flash Flood Drives 500 From Homes

Rutland, Vt., June 4 (A.P.).—A flash flood roaring out of a broken power dam paralyzed this second largest Vermont city today causing damage estimated at two million dollars, but there were no known casualties.

The Army and Red Cross rushed supplies here, the area hardest hit when a half dozen New England rivers overflowed after yesterday's torrential downpour. Almost 4 inches of rain fell.

Still missing late today was Richard La Viceoire, 13, who police feared may have been swept to his death watching the tons of water cascading down the valley after the East Pittsford Dam broke 4 miles north of the city.

In adjoining New Hampshire, a landslide south of Littleton blocked the Boston & Maine's line between Woodsville and Berlin.

Trucks were hauling drinking water over hastily repaired highways to Rutland as the public works officials said it might be several days before broken water mains could be repaired. National Guardsmen patrolled low-lying West End—excluding residents for health reasons.

A half dozen wooden covered bridges—landmarks of old Vermont—were washed away along with two main spans including one carrying important rail traffic into Rutland.

Sidewalk Fair Of Southwestern Library Opens

The Southwestern Branch of the Public Library will stage its second annual Sidewalk Fair on 7th st. between H and I sts. sw. today from 10 a. m. to 8 p. m.

Planned as a demonstration of social, recreational and educational activities in the Southwest area, the fair will consist of exhibits by 28 civic and community organizations, schools and churches. Each participating agency will have its own booth, and the fair will occupy most of the block in front of the library building.

Purposes of the fair, according to Mrs. Dorothy D. Mason, chairman of arrangements, is to promote closer cooperation among the Southwest organizations, and to acquaint residents of the area with the facilities and programs of both public and private agencies.

Air Forces to Get New Jet Engine

Burbank, Calif., June 4 (U.P.) A turbo-jet engine packing more power than a Diesel electric railroad engine has been developed for the Army Air Forces, a joint announcement by two aircraft manufacturing firms said today.

The new engine is the result of six years of study by Menasco Manufacturing Co. and Lockheed Aircraft Corp. The new engine produces a thrust of up to 5000 pounds and yet is light enough for installation in small planes.

PLAN AND PLANT

Now is the time to buy the site for that dream house you will be able to build to advantage before long. Now is the time to set out the shrubbery, plant those fruit trees and build up the garden spot with soy beans and crimson clover. It takes three years to develop the grounds around a new home. Buy wisely starting now and build the house when good materials are available again at lower prices. Buy an acre or more from our large selection, on terms if you wish.

Incentives to business efficiency and individual success are discussed in this editorial currently appearing in McGraw-Hill publications. It may be quoted or reprinted with or without credit mention.

YOUR CHANCES of getting ahead

FOR 20 years we have been whittling away the foundations of our economic structure. We have been cutting away the incentives to "get ahead in the world," to increase production and to improve efficiency. Unless this process is reversed soon, we risk the sort of industrial stagnation that currently afflicts Great Britain so disastrously.

How far the whittling has gone is shown by the statement in the center of the page. It shows that everyone's stake in working harder and getting ahead has been reduced sharply since 1929. In that year, anyone who was even moderately successful could look forward to reaping the rewards of his success. If he earned $5,300 annually over a period of 25 years he could retire on a comfortable income of $3,000 per year. Or he could pile up enough capital to go into business for himself. He could fulfill the American dream as phrased by Abraham Lincoln in his first annual message to Congress in 1861:

"The prudent, penniless beginner in the world, labors for wages awhile, saves a surplus with which to buy tools or land for himself, then labors on his own account another while, and at length hires another new beginner to help him. This is the just and generous and prosperous system, which opens the way to all, gives hope to all, and consequent energy and progress, and improvement of condition to all."

Look at the situation today. To retire on an annual income from investment that will buy as much as $3,000 did in 1929, a young man needs to earn over $13,000 a year for 25 years. That's more than 2½ times the income he would have needed in 1929. The same thing is true of acquiring a stake in a business.

WHY TRY TO SUCCEED?

While the income needed for retirement today has increased 2½ times—or by more than 150%—since 1929, the average person's income has increased only 80%. So the average man's chances of achieving success are really slimmer now than a generation ago.

This 1929-47 trend is something new in America. The average person's chances of getting ahead improved during 1914-29. In that period the dollar income needed for retirement or a stake in business rose by 75%, but the average income rose by 100%. So more people were within striking distance of success and security in 1929 than in 1914. The story has been different since 1929.

Fewer people actually do achieve financial success today. Only 1% of all families now have incomes large enough to build up a retirement fund or a stake in business. In 1929 almost 6% of all families attained a comparable degree of success.

Higher taxes are the most important reason why it takes so much more now to build up a competence. They account for one-half the increase in the amount needed. The other half is explained by higher living costs and lower interest rates.

It is, of course, true that few people ever get into the higher income brackets. So the process of cutting away the incentives which play such a key role in our economic system affects comparatively few people immediately. It does, however have a powerful indirect effect on all of us.

EVERYBODY LOSES

When from one-half to four-fifths of any additional income of successful people goes to Uncle Sam, a heavy drag is obviously put on doing the work to get it. Thus, we stand to lose the benefit of full use of the nation's best brains. By so doing we stifle industrial progress. And the loss in productive efficiency far outweighs the amount of tax revenue the Treasury gains. Carried far enough, the process of stifling economic progress by slashing rewards leads straight to industrial stagnation.

The same process also multiplies the risks of embarking on new capital investment. High taxes rule out all but the most profitable new projects and restrict most expansions to boom times when profits are high. So capital investment follows a boom and bust pattern and, by so doing, contributes much to ups and downs in production and employment.

BRITAIN'S SORRY PLIGHT

The case of Britain today provides an object lesson of how blighted incentives produce industrial stagnation. Britain's number one economic problem is to get more production. But the tax load there is so heavy it stifles the incentive to produce more.

A coal miner who works an extra shift pays about a third of his added earnings to the tax collector. And, as the London Economist comments, tax rates on business executives are so high that they kill every incentive except that to tax evasion. In short, not only is the incentive to succeed blighted, but so is the incentive to work.

A root-cause of Britain's trouble is this: The cost of an expensive program of social benefits has been piled on top of the heavy costs of paying for past wars and trying to prevent future wars. Tax rates are boosted accordingly. What her experience proves is that the attempt to provide excessive social benefits may defeat itself. It raises the tax burden on rich and poor alike and smothers the incentive to work. So the underlying basis of all economic benefits—production—is eaten away.

IT'S NOT TOO LATE

We in the U. S. haven't traveled as far down the stagnation road as Britain has. Taxes amount to about 26% of national income here as against about 45% there. But, unless we start soon to build up incentives to do better work, instead of whittling them away as we have been doing, we will catch up with Britain fast.

Can anything be done? Decidedly yes, particularly by tax reform and reduction in the cost of living. As far as interest rates are concerned, any large increase would raise excessively the cost of carrying our war-swollen national debt, and hence raise taxes. But some increase in what are now excessively low interest rates may well be both feasible and desirable.

Action on the tax front is the first order of business. Our jerry-built tax structure is the thing that is chiefly responsible for cutting the incentives to work harder. Two things are important: 1) Government spending must be pared to the bone; 2) The tax system must be completely overhauled to remove the shackles on all-out production.

The 56th editorial in this series, published in March, outlined major steps that need to be taken in remodeling federal taxes in order to increase incentives to individual and business enterprise. The "Individual Income Tax Reduction Act of 1947" is no more than a short step in the right direction. Much more must be done to clear the way for high production and rising living standards.

Lifting the blight which taxes now place on incentives would help cut the high cost of living. It would stimulate greater production and greater efficiency. But a further step is necessary. Part of the benefits of improved efficiency must be passed on to consumers in the form of lower prices.

In the past few years we have been following precisely the opposite course. In many cases wages have been increased all out of proportion to increased productivity. Result—soaring prices and a severe squeeze of the consumer, to which some greedy exploitation of war-created shortages has also contributed.

TO GIVE ABILITY A CHANCE

Our basic and most crucial problem is to get back on the track which leads to higher production and improved living standards all along the line. We got off that track in the 30's. Then, we started scrambling for larger slices of the same pie instead of trying to produce a larger pie. Now the process of getting back on the track is greatly complicated by the tremendous tax burden growing out of the war.

Yet it's not too late to turn back from the road that leads to industrial stagnation. As the statement in the center of the page shows, we could restore the odds of getting ahead to what they were in 1929. Cutting the federal budget to $25 billion a year and putting the tax structure in good order are the crucial first steps.

By taking these steps soon, Congress can go far to restore the incentives to hard work and efficiency which have been so largely washed away in the past 20 years. If they are not taken, the American dream of getting ahead by hard and effective work will exist only in the history books, and our children will inherit from us an economic order without opportunity, without hope, without individual liberty.

YOUR CHANCES OF GETTING AHEAD

To see how your chances of getting on in the world have changed during the past few decades, the McGraw-Hill Department of Economics has calculated how much it now takes to save enough to acquire a retirement income or a comparable stake in a business, as compared to what it took in 1914 and 1929.

The objective set is an income from investment equal to $3,000 a year in 1929 dollars. It is assumed that the savings required to yield this income are made over a period of twenty-five years. During that period it is also assumed that $4,000 per year (in 1929 dollars) is spent on living expenses.*

Here is how the figures work out:

	Yearly Income Needed
1914	$3,075
1929	5,267
1947	13,221

It now takes more than four times as large an annual income as it did in 1914 to gain a comparable stake. It takes well over twice as much as it did in 1929.

Changes in three factors—federal income taxes, living costs, and interest rates—explain why the income needed has multiplied so. Here's how these factors line up for the three years.

	Federal Income Taxes Married Man, 2 dependents		Cost of Living (Index Numbers 1935-39)	Interest Rate High-grade Corporate Bonds
	$5,000 income	$10,000 income
1914	$10	$60	71.8	5%
1929	$3	$40	122.5	5%
1947	$589	$1,862	155.0	2½%

Similar calculations show that if we could reduce federal expenditures from $35 billion to $25 billion annually, raise interest rates by one-tenth and lower living costs by 15%—all realistic possibilities if we make the effort—then the income needed to build up such a retirement fund would come down to $9,500. The chances of realizing that goal would then be restored to what they were in 1929.

*Several other factors were omitted from the calculations because they would not have a decisive effect on the results. Thus, existence of social security pensions and retirement funds now reduces the income needed; but if state income taxes were added, the income needed would increase.

Joyce Kelley Makes Bow At Sulgrave Club Tea

AT A TEA DANCE given by her grandmother, dark-haired Miss Joyce Kelley made her debut yesterday afternoon at the Sulgrave Club. She wore a gown of white net with flowers in her hair and carried a bouquet of white roses and blue delphinium.

Guests included friends of the debutante's parents, Mr. and Mrs. McClure Kelley of Wayne, Ill., who had come on to see their daughter graduate from Madeira School last Monday. A number of Miss Kelley's young friends from Madeira were invited to the dance, and in the stag line was a representative group from Eastern schools and colleges.

The hostess, Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, received in a black lace dress and broad brimmed white hat and the debutante's mother wore a print frock with small flowered hat. There was a fragrance of peonies in the flower-filled room. Young couples twirled in the ballroom, while tea was served in the drawing room.

Mrs. Kelley's friends who assisted in pouring included Mme. Sze, wife of the former Chinese Minister; Mrs. Daniel Devore, Mrs. Hugh S. Cumming, Mrs. Fulton Lewis, Miss Bertha Noyes, Mrs. Perry S. Heath, Mrs. James Taylor, Mrs. Corrin Strong, Mrs. Duncan McKim, Miss Temple Bailey and Mrs. Charles Lindsay. Other assistants were Mrs. Arthur H. Tirrell, Miss Dorothy Tirrell and Mrs. Frank A. Ellithorpe.

The debutante will spend the summer in New England with her family and will return to the Capital at Christmas time for a round of parties.

"At Home"

Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis will be "at home" at the Sulgrave Club today from 5 to 7 o'clock.

Bond Issue For Schools Gets Support

Maryland's State Senator, Roy Tasco Davis yesterday expressed opposition to open gambling and extending sale of liquor to pay the State's proposed expanded educational program.

Guest speaker at the Silver Spring Woman's Club's annual installation luncheon held at the Kennedy Warren, the former United States Minister to Costa Rica and Guatemala, said that he approved a bond issue for school buildings and a reasonable increase in taxes to increase teachers' salaries.

"We need to make an investment in brains first and bricks second," declared the Senator. "The primary concern is to up teachers' salaries first in order to interest young people in adopting teaching as a profession.

Would Exceed State Raise

He told the audience that Montgomery County hopes to pay its teachers higher wages than authorized by the State. Faculty salary jumps as proposed would be from $300 to $600. The State raise was from $1500 to $2200 per annum.

In his discussion of "Education at Home and Abroad," Senator Davis, who is director of the Inter-American School Service operated by the State Department, said that the Latin American countries pay 3½ million to support the service while the United States contributes only $120,000.

There are 270 American type schools attended by 55,000 Latin American children, according to Senator Davis.

Germans Showed Way

Minister to Costa Rica when Charles Evans Hughes was Secretary of State, he called attention to the State Department that the Germans had set up good schools in Latin America, which they used to propagandize the fatherland ideology. At that time he suggested that the United States also establish schools where our way of life could be taught.

During the luncheon Mrs. George Eastment was installed president of the club. Mrs. Charles F. Morey, president of the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Club's conducted the installation ceremony.

Others inducted were Mrs. John T. Ross, first vice president; Mrs. William B. Marks, second vice president; Mrs. Maurice du Mars, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Louis B. Schneider, recording secretary; Mrs. Harold Allen, treasurer; Mrs. John W. Ayers, federation director.

Alexander Hadassah Installs Officers

Mrs. Jack Levinson was installed president of Alexander chapter of Hadassah at a luncheon held yesterday at the home of Mrs. Benjamin Frank in Alexandria. Mrs. Samuel Lubin, chairman of the speakers bureau for the Seaboard Region of Hadassah administered the oaths of office. She was also principal speaker at the event. Others inducted included Mrs. Jerome Baum, first vice president; Mrs. Alfred Abramson, second vice president; Mrs. Samuel Novak, third vice president; Mrs. Dave Burk, recording secretary; Mrs. Emanuel Salzinger, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Al Levinson, financial secretary; Mrs. Al Baker, treasurer; Mrs. Irving Scholl, assistant corresponding secretary; Mrs. Sidney Abramson, parliamentarian; Mrs. Philip Rudin, historian; Mrs. Hugo Schiff and Mrs. Saul Leeman, trustees.

Jewish Relief Society Holds Reward Luncheon

The Intermediate Group of the Jewish Consumptives Relief Society held its second reward luncheon yesterday at Hotel 2400. Honor guests were members who had sold a specified number of tickets for the Washington group's benefit dance held in April.

Mrs. Samuel Seidel took the prize for selling the largest number of tickets. Mrs. Max Roxenberg, speaker, discussed the society's work in aiding the tuberculosis hospital in Denver and the need for continuation and expansion of the program. Mrs. Leo Leibskind, president, presided.

Luncheon arrangements were made by Mrs. Samuel Berger, chairman, and Mrs. Hy Fineman, cochairman.

Mrs. Woodward Honored by North Carolina U.

Another honor came to Mrs. Ellen Woodward Monday when the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina conferred the degree of doctor of laws on the Mississippi-born director of international relations for the Federal Security Agency.

Mrs. Woodward

Since she was called to Washington during the depression days to work with Harry L. Hopkins on Federal emergency relief, the soft-spoken, auburn-haired Southerner has risen steadily in public service until she now occupies one of the top-ranking positions held by women in the Federal Government. Her public career began in 1925 when she was elected a member of the Mississippi State Legislature.

A former member of the Social Security Board and previously assistant administrator of WPA, Mrs. Woodward has participated in eight international conferences, six of them being meetings of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. She will be an adviser on welfare at the final UNRRA meeting to be held in Washington this month.

Mrs. Woodward's administrative ability is practically a family trait. Daughter of the late United States Senator William V. Sullivan, she is the widow of Judge Albert Y. Woodward, lawyer and jurist who preceded his wife as a member of the Mississippi Legislature. She has one son, Albert Y. Woodward, jr., until recently a captain in the Army.

Opera Guild to Meet

Mary Haworth's Mail

Four Years Ago, When 26, Man Married Naive Girl Then 18, Keeping Youthful Love Affair A Secret; Now She Knows and Can't Forgive

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 30 years old and my wife is 22. We've been married four years. My wife was an innocent girl of 18 when we married. I was 26 and much to my sorrow had a previous affair while in my teens.

Because my wife was so naive and because I didn't think it had any bearing on our relationship, I kept silent about the past. She asked no questions and we were very happy for three years. Now we have a baby of whom we are both very proud.

After a few years of marriage, when she had become more conscious of the facts of life, my wife grew curious about my personal history before we met. Finally she asked a direct question and I thought it best to give an honest answer, so I told her there had been an affair when I was younger.

How Win Wife's Understanding?

SINCE that time her love for me has cooled. She tells me she has no feeling for me any more. Deep in her heart the thought persists that there was someone before her. I explained that it happened years before we met and since our marriage I had been a good husband. Not once had I given a serious thought to anyone else. All my thoughts were for her and our happiness.

Our social interests are mutual. I have no faults such as drinking or gambling and this one thing seems to be the only cloud on our horizon. Can you advise me how to atone for my past? Or how to convince her that we have a happy marriage ahead of us, by being more forgiving and charitable in our thoughts? I would appreciate recommendation of a good book for us to read. T. J.

Wife's Attitude Is Preposterous

DEAR T. J.: Get up off your knees. You don't owe your wife abject apologies for a transgression of youth renounced years before you met and married her. It should be sufficient for her to know—if she must know all—that you repented the mistake in sorrow long ago and have not since repeated it; not even in thought.

According to Luke 15:7, "I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over 90 and 9 just persons which need no repentance."

Your wife ought to be ashamed of herself: 1. For taking Delilah-advantage of mental intimacy to pry into your early personal history, directly laboring the question of whether you had premarital sex experience. 2. For reacting so self righteously to the information she pried out of you.

Without Charity We Are Nothing

SELF righteousness is said by moral savants to be the "unforgivable sin" mentioned in Scriptures; and indeed it is the very antithesis of that charity-of-heart without which we are spiritually dead, according to St. Paul.

Let's look at that magnificent passage in 13 Corinthians: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy and understand all mysteries and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could move mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing."

So much for a moral slant on your wife's harsh treatment of your humility. As food for her soul I recommend the following from Matthew 7:3-5, "And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

"Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye; and behold, a beam is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye."

Wife Is Covering Other Sentiments

IN CONCLUSION, however, it is my belief that the rift didn't start with your confession. Rather I think your wife is making capital of it to justify a fed-up attitude toward conjugal intimacy that she hadn't the courage to admit before—because she had no excuse to offer.

Now that she has a child to absorb her affectional energies, maybe she has lost all interest in you sexually. Or maybe her change of heart is entirely due to being 22, instead of 18. Maybe she knows now—without saying—that she married too young to know what she was doing, and consequently finds herself, from her private viewpoint, rebelliously tied to a man who bores her exceedingly. In any event, my advice is to take this problem to the family doctor and have him audit the story thoroughly. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Post.

Dress Up Picnic Box With Sandwich Variety

Variety is the "spice" of the picnic box. Since sandwiches are really the main course of the packed meal, use your imagination to make them as interesting as possible. Try varying the color, the flavor, the texture and even the shape.

For crunchy variety in those portable lunches, slip in a few graham crackers put together in pairs with a mixture of equal parts of cream cheese and tart jelly or jam.

Breakfast Sandwich

For a delightful breakfast sandwich, spread a slice of piping hot French toast generously with plum preserves and top with a second slice of toast.

Raisin Pie With Meringue

When next the family clamors for a good homemade pie, bake an old-fashioned sour cream raisin pie. Finish off with a light-as-seafoam meringue.

Your Questions On Homemaking

We have built a quarry tile porch and used acid to clean off the cement. It looked all right at first but now it is dusty in streaks. We have waxed it and still it doesn't come off. Please tell us what to do to get it clean and how to polish it. J. H. S.

It will be necessary for you to remove all the wax before you can remove the streaks from the tile. To remove, use a prepared wax remover or add a small quantity of a packaged cleaner of the water softening type to water and wash the floor, using a scrubbing brush. If some of the streaks remain, rub them with fine steel wool and wash and dry thoroughly. When the surface is thoroughly dry, apply wax and polish. If you will apply wax frequently, the floor will become less absorbent and will acquire a pleasing shine.

How can suede shoes be cleaned after the suede has been rubbed? Why does meringue get tough? L. R. S.

Rubbed suede may be made to appear velvety again by brushing thoroughly to remove the surface soil and then by buffing with a pad of sponge rubber to bring up the nap. Sometimes soiled spots can be removed with cleaning powder. Let the powder stand for 20 minutes and brush it off.

A meringue will be tough if it is not baked very slowly at 300 degrees F. for 15 to 20 minutes. When removed from the oven it should be set out of drafts so it will cool slowly.

I have gummy brown creosote on a washable cotton dress. Will you please tell me what will remove it? M. W. H.

Creosote or tar stains are not always easily removed, but try this: Soften the stain by rubbing with vaseline. Let stand for 15 minutes, then soak in a cleaning fluid. Wash in warm suds and rinse.

U. S.-Backed Peanut Prices Brings Protest

By The Associated Press

Housewives are leaving peanut butter on grocery shelves because of current high prices, J. L. Rosefield, representing the Peanut Butter Manufacturers Association, said yesterday.

He told the House Agriculture Committee — considering a long range farm program—that Government support prices for peanuts are so high that "it forces peanut butter up so far that we are being priced out of the market."

Representative Pace (D., Ga.) said he knew of no industry "where the costs of production have increased as much as in production of peanuts."

Rosefield said the 1947 support program of 90 per cent of parity would guarantee peanut farmers about $200 a ton for their product.

"While we will have to pay these high prices for our manufacturing plants, crushers of peanuts for oil can buy peanuts at $95 a ton from the Commodity Credit Corporation, which will take a loss of $105 a ton," he asserted.

The witness said that if peanut butter manufacturers were permitted to buy peanuts from the CCC at even $150 a ton they would be able to compete satisfactorily with other bread spreads.

Too Much Jollity

Manchester, England, June 3 (U.P.).—Stanley Rothwell, 50, was granted a divorce today from his 45-year-old wife on his charge that she committed adultery with a guest at the wedding of their daughter.

"Mrs. Rothwell was apparently overcome by the jollification at the party," the judge said.

17 Years in Jungle

Missionary Returning to Green Hell

New York, June 4.—Ants taste like salty peanuts and caterpillars are tasteless.

This was the wry opinion today of the Rev. Andrew Linssen, who hopes to return soon to the "green hell" jungles of Colombia, where he passed 17 years as a Catholic missionary and where he existed at times on ants and caterpillars.

"When I first arrived there, I found 200 Indian natives living in a 100 by 200 foot common dwelling," Father Linssen, a missionary priest of the Society of Mary of Montfort, recalled as he sat in the rectory of St. Mary Gate of Heaven Roman Catholic Church, Ozone Park, Long Island.

Made Pants, Dresses

"They were stark naked. It took me months to make friends. I gave fish hooks to children and started a school for them. I made pants for the boys and dresses for the girls, using a sewing machine I had brought along to this mission on the Papury River, near the northwest corner of Brazil.

"Soon fathers came along and asked for pants too. They soon began to trust me. I also served as doctor, since I studied medicine in Rotterdam. It took seven years to get a decent farm built, but before then I often ate ants and caterpillars when the fathers were too lazy to hunt. I never got sick."

Father Linssen, who passed the last year visiting his 73-year-old mother in Maastricht, the Netherlands, told how the superstitious natives used to bury alive newborn twins and deformed children.

Congressmen Asked to Curb RR Association

By the United Press

Congressional action to curb the powers of the Association of American Railroads was recommended by former Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge yesterday as a basic remedy for the current shortage of railroad freight cars in the West.

Berge was sharply critical of the AAR in testifying before an informal committee of Congressmen from 19 Western States who are investigating alleged discrimination against the West by Eastern railroads in the allocation of freight cars.

He said the AAR exercises strict control over the distribution of cars to various railroads and uses that control to further the interests of the Eastern railroads.

Berge, who retired to private law practice after initiating a Federal antitrust suit against the AAR and a large bloc of railroads at Lincoln, Nebr., last April, said the association is helping big Eastern financial and industrial interests to preserve their markets and stave off competition from the West.

As a result, he said, the Eastern railroads refuse to return empty cars to the West and the Western roads are forced to accept the situation or be expelled from the AAR.

He suggested legislation which would require the Interstate Commerce Commission to establish and supervise the terms upon which all railroads, without fear of reprisals from the AAR, may participate in the interchange of freight with each other.

Unless something is done to correct what he called the present "monopolistic trend" in the railroad industry, he warned, the entire industry may have to be nationalized or the general public may demand that it be reformed by Government action.

Full General's Rank Approved for Geiger

By The Associated Press

The House approved yesterday a resolution granting the posthumous rank of full general to Lieut. Gen. Roy S. Geiger, Marine Corps hero who died in January. The measure goes to the Senate.

Geiger, who had been in the corps 39 years, commanded the Marine divisions on Okinawa, and took command of the Tenth Army there on the death of Lieut. Gen. Simon B. Buckner.

Student Flier Gets License, 'Doctorate' on Same Day

George Randall, 26-year-old student flier of Alexandria, Va., has his private pilot's license and a postgraduate course on one-wheel landings.

Flying out of Franconia Airport southwest of Alexandria, Randall was going through aerial requirements for his private license—with Civil Aeronautics Authority Examiner A. C. Weaver in the rear seat.

Sometime during the maneuvers, the light plane shed the right side of its landing gear. Its plight was noted from the ground by another student living near the field and the alarm was phoned to the airport.

At the field, they painted a quick whitewash sign "wheel off" and then sent another pilot aloft to carry the bad news. By this time, Weaver, with 17 years' flying experience, caught on.

"We've lost a wheel," he told Randall. "I wonder if you'd mind letting me land this thing." Randall was willing.

Weaver brought the plan in on the lone wheel without injury to either occupant and with but little damage to the aircraft.

Then he filled out the papers which states that Randall is "properly qualified to exercise the privileges of a pilot." It also says, "airplane, single engine, land."

The number of wheels isn't specified.

Gifts Total $4100 In Boys Club Drive

Contributions of $4100 have been received in the campaign to raise $25,000 for the Prince Georges County Boys' Club, campaign workers announced yesterday.

The campaign opened May 15 and will close June 15. The money collected so far represents mail contributions and advance gifts, according to Louis B. Arnold, president of the Boys' Clubs. Reports from chairmen of zones have not been received as yet.

Announcement also was made that the Prince Georges County Golf and Country Club pool will be available to members of the clubs during the summer.

New Citizens Hear Speech By Col. Oliver

A survivor of the Bataan death march, Col. A. C. Oliver, retired Army chaplain, told a group of 42 newly naturalized Americans of the aims, ideals, and advantages of citizenship.

The ceremony was held in the District Court courtroom of Associate Justice James M. Proctor.

Turning his remarks especially toward the 16 Filipinos in the group, Oliver said: "The people of the Philippines many times have saved my life and the lives of my people." Colonel Oliver spent 3 years and 9 months as a Jap captive. He was taken at the fall of Bataan while serving on the staff of Gen. Jonathan Wainwright.

Those granted final citizenship papers were:

Cunig Mainile, Rosy Lamotte, Ramon Mejias, Mary Nichols, Fernando Aguilar, Norman Hicks, Dean A. Jabber, Valerio Clarion, Josephine Chesney, Sophie Lovenstuk, Francisco Lorino, Anibasio Pedregal, Leon Villas, Constantine Tsoukos, Valeriano Fontanilla, Adolfo Gonzolo, Leonard Brandis, w., Jennie Pollatt, Leong Hand, Olga Sorensen, Ralph C. Also Vera J. Weisbord, Elizabeth Wylie, Regina E. Lonsdorf, John Owen Jones, Josephine Kaszubowski, Adolfo Sobejano, Ella Mae Hudgins, Dean R. Peterson, Leonard Chang Bong, Anthony Bolzer, Edna Frank Hoover, Louis A. Crespo and George L. Nicolopoulos.

Device to Replay Radio Programs To Be Shown Here

Something new has been added to the modern radio. It's a "wire recorder" which enables a listener to record his favorite program on a spool of stainless steel wire and replay it later for his friends.

The device is included in a new "wire recorder, radio and phonograph combination," which Sears Roebuck & Co. will put on display at its local stores for the first time Friday.

Developed by Sears and several of its manufacturing sources, the wire recorder combination also may be used to record personal conversations, speeches and ordinary records.

The combination will sell for $199.50 with one spool of wire, enough to record a program lasting more than one hour.

'Furnace' Task Force To Test Guns in Desert

Guns, helmets, rations and GIs will be tested in a task force, rightly named "Furnace" in the searing heat of the Great American Desert near Yuma, Ariz., Gen. Jacob Devers, Army Ground Force commander, announced yesterday.

In daily temperatures normally exceeding 100 degrees, 300 picked troops for the next 3½ months will subject weapons and material to workouts designed to simulate wartime desert combat.

Lieut. Col. Walter B. Richardson, Beaumont, Tex., commands the task force.

Christian Unit Opens Appeal For Jewish Aid

Paced by contributions from New York business leaders, the National Christian Committee's fund drive for the United Jewish Appeal was launched yesterday.

The goal is 170 million dollars, and is for the relief, rehabilitation and resettlement of the Jewish survivors of war and oppression in Europe.

Henry Morgenthau, jr., general chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, announced a $75,000 gift from J. P. Stevens, New York textile leader; $25,000 from Nelson A. Rockefeller, $15,000 from the Anheuser-Busch Brewery in St. Louis; $15,000 from Robert Uihlein for the Schlitz Brewery of Milwaukee.

Simultaneously, Morgenthau announced 13 more American leaders have joined the recently-established National Christian Committee, bringing total membership to more than 100. The newest members: Commerce Secretary W. Averell Harriman; Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State; James A. Farley; Paul H. Griffith, National American Legion commander; Clifford J. Durr, of the Federal Communications Commission; John Hay Whitney; Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University; Winthrop H. Crane, president of Crane & Co.; Spyros P. Skouras of Twentieth Century Fox Films Corp.; Dr. K. Frances Scott, National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

S. C. Allyn, National Cash Register Co., and W. Dale Clark, president of the Omaha (Neb.) National Bank.

Funds Asked to Investigate Postmaster Appointments

The Senate Civil Service Committee has voted to spend $33,000 to find out how much politics is mixed up in President Truman's appointments of 775 persons to lifetime jobs as postmasters.

Splitting along straight party lines, the committee decided Tuesday to ask the Senate for funds to discover if qualified civil service candidates were being ignored in favor of "broken-down hacks" of the Democratic Party.

The three Democrats on the committee charged that the six Republicans were bent on "a costly fishing expedition" in order to force the President to hand some of the postmasterships over to good GOP members.

Expects No Difficulty

Chairman William Langer (R., N. Dak.) once before requested the Senate to appropriate funds to investigate the postmasters whose appointments have been blocked for months in his committee.

His request was knocked out on a point of order because it had not been presented to the full committee. Before the Senate can act the Rules Committee will have to pass on the request. Langer indicated he expected no difficulty in having the request approved by the GOP-controlled Senate.

The investigation was proposed originally by Chairman Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) of the Senate Judiciary Committee soon after the Republican victory last November.

Inquiry on "Tribute"

The investigation would include:

1. Political activities in the Civil Service, chiefly in the postmaster field.

2. An inquiry into whether any postmasters "on threat of losing their positions have been compelled to pay tribute financially or otherwise to anyone or to a group of politicians."

3. An inquiry into "whether there has been an attempt to compel men and women occupying the position of postmaster to violate the Hatch clean politics act."

Mistake in Beginning

In the brisk interchange over the inquiry, Senator C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.) said he thought it had been a mistake to put postmasters under Civil Service in the first place.

"They are political appointments," Buck declared, "and I believe they ought to be political appointments."

The Republicans said they did not intend to investigate each and every one of the 775 appointments.

Langer said there had been many definite complaints of irregularities and it is these the committee wants to investigate.

Who, me?

Yes, you! You're headed straight for trouble.

Doctors and dentists, lawyers and school teachers, salesmen and clerks. Farmers, grocers, butchers and bakers.

Your income depends on a prosperous America. A prosperous America depends on good wages, regularly paid. When wages drop, you know what happens. Everyone gets hit. It happened in '29. It may happen again!

Right now wages are in danger. This is why:

FACT: Good wages depend on strong labor unions. Individual workers cannot bargain with employers on an equal basis without a strong union behind them.

FACT: Congress has passed the Taft-Hartley bill that will drastically weaken the strength of unions to bargain collectively for adequate wages.

FACT: The unions were weakened once before. And prices and profits in the late 1920's soared to record heights.

FACT: During those years workers' wages lagged behind prices. Buying fell off. Men lost their jobs. The Big Depression began.

Today the same thing is happening. President Truman has warned that prices are too high. So far business has done almost nothing to lower them.

If the President signs the Taft-Hartley bill labor will be weakened, everyone's buying power will drop. The 1929-33 depression will start all over again.

PROTECT YOURSELF BY PROTECTING AMERICAN LABOR
SAVE AMERICA FROM ANOTHER '29!

What can you do? Plenty! You can write or wire President Truman, The White House, Washington, D. C., saying you pledge him support in vetoing the Taft-Hartley bill. You can ask your friends to write or wire the President. Tell the President you can't afford laws that weaken unions. Send letters or wires to President Truman. Do it today—your interests are at stake!

Washington Industrial Union Council, CIO 1603 K Street N.W.
Washington Telephone Traffic Union 718 5th Street N.W.

So You Don't Belong to a Union!

But—The Taft-Hartley Labor Bill Gets You Anyway

Everyone suffers in a depression. And the Taft-Hartley anti-labor bill pushes the whole country toward depression because—

It weakens the bargaining strength of 15,000,000 organized workers. This means no more raises no matter how high prices go.

It means pay cuts.

Pay cuts mean layoffs and less business for everybody—small businessmen, office workers, Government employees, housewives, wage-earners.

It means lack of any kind of security on the job whether you're a union member or not. Unions have won much of the security and good conditions which non-union workers now enjoy—including conditions on Government jobs.

The National Association of Manufacturers conducted an anti-union drive after World War I, using every type of violence to break the unions (It's in the record).

This time the National Association of Manufacturers is using Taft, Hartley and some of their colleagues to destroy the bargaining power of working people. When working people cannot bargain, everyone suffers—union or non-union, housewife and businessman. An anti-union drive led us into depression in the 20's—it will do it again—

Unless—

President Truman vetoes the bill—and the veto is upheld.

Write to the President Today and urge him to veto the Taft-Hartley Bill!

Note to Government Employees:

The La Follette Act of 1913 guarantees to you the right to communicate your views on legislation to the President of the United States. Writing to the President to veto the Taft-Hartley Bill is not a violation of the Hatch Act or any other law.

McLindon for Congress Boom Gets Under Way

CONGRATULATIONS, BOB

This is the kind of story that's often overlooked, because it's not "spectacular."

Last year there were 400 boys at Camp Reeder, competing for the coveted award that annually goes to the "outstanding" lad.

On Thursday night, at the Georgetown Branch of the Boys' Club of Washington, the winner for last summer will be announced.

He's 14-year-old Robert McLindon, of 1026 25th st. nw., who was chosen for his "cooperation, excellence and participation in camp activities, popularity, and leadership."

Bob McLindon

Bob has been a member of the Boys' Club for six years, and last year was on the club's governing council. He goes to St. John's High School, and his best sports are baseball and basketball.

Twenty years from now, he'll probably be one of our first Congressional Representatives from the District.

SHIRT TALE

Some time ago I complained that my "non-shrinkable" size 15½ shirt had become a size 15 after two washings. I offered to give it to the District Liner who sent in the best story.

Later the man who sold me the shirt insisted that I return it to him so I said I'd pay $7.50 in cash instead of awarding the shirt.

Afterward the column got pressed for space, and I didn't carry any further report of the matter. But J. C. Collins, of 3563 S. Stafford st., Arlington, Va., won't let me off so easily. He says of our contest:

It drags on for weeks
And still there's no winner;
His column grows fatter,
His contributors thinner.

To prove that I can take a hint, I am herewith sending a check for $7.50 to Oliver Ediss, of 2141 H st. nw., for his several amusing contributions.

Honorable mention (plus my thanks) to: Clark Moore, 2163 N. Brandywine st., Arlington, Va., and Andy F. Kisacky, 1929 1st st. nw.

MARY NEEDS HELP

Here's a really tough one. Maybe one of you District Liners has the answer to it.

Shortly after her baby was born, Mary discovered that her "husband" was a bigamist.

It was a bad break, but she took it like a champion and vowed that she'd make her own way without abandoning her child.

There are lots of welfare agencies that are willing to take the child away from its mother. What Mary wants is a place where she can live with her baby—where there'd be somebody at home during the day, to keep an eye on it.

On a government girl's salary that's pretty tough. Mary makes about $2000 a year, but she's willing to pay as much as $20 a week for housing if she can keep the baby.

If you can help, please call me at The Post.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Bernard Gilliam, counselor at Jefferson Junior High School, 8th and H sts. sw., sends us this note:

"The kids and I would appreciate your mentioning that we are trying to line up 40 summer vacation jobs for our pupils.

"Boys and girls from 14 to 17 years of age are available for filing, typing, clerical work, baby sitting, selling, stock room work, help in gas stations, etc.

"Most of these youngsters come from families with less-than-average incomes, and they'll make good workers. Interested employers can contact me by mail, or call National 6000 and ask for Jefferson Junior High School."

If any of those older boys bat right-handed and can hit .300 Mr. Gilliam, please advise immediately. I know a fellow named Griffith who'd be glad to furnish steady employment all summer.

	♠ 7 3 ♡ A J 7 ◇ Q J 8 7 ♣ 9 6 5 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
2♣	Pass	2♡	Pass
7♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 10♠.

The North-South players of today's deal were using different systems for answering forcing two-bids so the pair played the hand at seven hearts, down four, when seven no trump was cold.

"South's two-heart reply was made to show a specific ace," writes E. C., of New York, "but North wasn't aware that the ace-showing convention was being used. He thought it was made in the usual sense, showing at least a high-card trick and a biddable heart suit, so he jumped to seven hearts."

East, who sat with seven hearts, slyly sealed his lips to a double and won four trump tricks to put the grand slam down four.
